ADV. WRITING.

MUCH advertising suffers from the inability of the amateur writer to get started without 15 minutes of "cranking up" and his inability to stop until the terminus is half a mile behind. Shall I hit the nail squarely on the head for you, Mr. Merchant or Manufacturer, with advertisements, booklets, circulars, etc., that carry the "punch" and possess terseness, timeliness, impressiveness and persuasiveness? Write me for my reasonable terms. George M. Zellmer, care of Kingston Freeman.

200 LIVES LOST IN JAVA EARTHQUAKE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Batavia, Java, June 27.—Latest reports received today indicate that at least 200 persons perished in the earthquake in Southern Sumatra yesterday. Twenty persons are known to have been killed in the Benkulen district, the only region in the quake zone to which communication had been restored today. Hundreds were injured, among them ten Europeans.

It was the worst quake known in Sumatra in many years.

The city of Benkulen, which was partially destroyed, is the seat of the British East India Company in Sumatra.

COLUMBIA CREW WINS GREAT RACE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 2.—What is a rowing expert? He is a man who watches six crews practicing on the Hudson river, picks five of them as possible winners and then sees the sixth and forlorn candidate romp merrily across the finish line, winner of the greatest honors that can fall to a college crew.

So it was with Columbia's victory at Poughkeepsie. No one had picked the light blue and white to defeat the Cornell crew. But they won.

To Coach Courtney of Cornell falls the sole honors of the guessing contest that preceded the race that brought together Cornell, Columbia, Pensylvania, Syracuse, Wisconsin and Washington. Before the race he said that Columbia was very fast for three miles and if they could stand the fourth mile they might win. He was right.

Jubilant over the fact that their varsity eight had won its first victory on the Hudson in 19 years, 300 Columbia University students celebrated so wildly until early today that they came into conflict with the police and fire departments of New York city.

As a result scores of the three hundred were clubbed by the policemen and the entire body was drenched by water from the hose of firemen called to extinguish a blaze that was destroying the fence of South Field on the university grounds. In his happiness, one of the students fired the fence and the firemen were called on the jump.

Before they turned their attention to the fire, however, they turned heavy streams of water on the celebrators and sent them scurrying to their rooms with the police close behind. The records follow:

'Varsity Eights.

Four miles.—Columbia won by 1½ lengths; Pennsylvania, second; Cornell, third; Syracuse, fourth; Washington, fifth; Wisconsin, sixth. Time—Columbia, 19:27 4-5; Pennsylvania, 19:41; Cornell, 19:44 1-5; Syracuse, 19:59 2-5; Washington, 20:01 3-5; Wisconsin, 20:20. Course record, four miles, Cornell, 18:53 1-5 in 1901.

Junior Eights.

Two miles.—Cornell won by 1½ lengths; Columbia, second; Pennsylvania, third; Syracuse, fourth. Time—Cornell, 11:15 2-5; Columbia, 11:25 2-5; Pennsylvania, 11:33 2-5; Syracuse, 11:50 3-5.

Freshman Eights.

Two miles.—Cornell won by seven lengths; Syracuse, second; Pennsylvania, third; Columbia, fourth, Wisconsin, fifth. Time—Cornell, 10:26; Syracuse, 10:50 1-5; Pennsylvania, 10:50 2-5; Columbia, 10:56 1-5; Wisconsin, 10:59. Course record for freshman eights, 9:11 3-5.

HILTERBRANT MARRIES GIRL.

Judge Humphrey Then Suspends Sentence Upon Him.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Long Island City, June 27.—Clarence Hilterbrant, 24 years old, of Kingston, N. Y., but who has been living at 145 Greene avenue, Brooklyn, for some time past, who was convicted in the Queens County Court, Tuesday, of last week, upon the complaint of Miss Elsie Augusta Black a pretty 22-year-old telephone operator, of Grand street, Maspeth, received a suspended sentence after he was married to the girl by Judge Humphrey, in his chambers yesterday afternoon.

NOISE MUST STOP.

Premature Celebrators of the Fourth Will be Arrested.

A number of complaints have been received at the police headquarters from residents both of the upper and lower parts of Kingston, that fire crackers and other fire works are being fired off in the streets by childen who find it impossible to wait until the Fourth. People who enjoy sitting on the porches evenings are very much annoyed by the reports of large fire crackers, and have asked the police to interfere. Therefore the police department wish to make it known that any one caught setting off fire crackers or anything else which causes a heavy report before the Fourth of July will be taken before the recorder and just punishment meted out to the offender.

BRIDGE PLANS NOT YET CORRECT

War Department Objects to Pier on Sleightsburgh Side That Would Interfere With the Flow of the Creek.

The latest plans for the Sleightsburgh bridge have been condemned by the war department and new plans will have to be drawn by the state highway department to meet the requirements of the war department. This was the information obtained by James F. Dwyer, John Hiltebrant and Jacob Rice at Albany on Friday where they attended a hearing on the bridge plans. The plans of the proposed bridge were condemned owing to the way one of the piers would be built in the channel on the Sleightsburgh side of the creek. The war department believed that the placing of this pier would interfere with the flow of the creek.

The plans which have been condemned called for a 3 per cent grade from Wurts street and meant that the bridge would be carried over to the Sleightsburgh side of the creek and the cutting through of twenty feet of the solid rock of the hill. The hearing was held before Commissioner Ricker who has charge of the construction of all the bridges in the state. The committee also called on Commissioner Carlisle in regard to the matter.

Commissioner Ricker, after he had heard the statements made by the committee, said he did not see any objection when the new plans were drawn up to make the grade from Wurts street at least 6 per cent. If this was done it would mean that the bridge would probably be high enough to allow ordinary vessels to pass under it and in the cases of sailing vessels they would be able to go up the creek by dropping the topmast.

The matter of having the grade of the bridge increased will be taken up with the boat interests by the committee asking all interested to take the matter up with the state department.

The fact that the present plans have been condemned of course will mean a further delay in the building of the bridge.

Accord Farm Sold.

Coutant & Davis, real estate brokers of this city, have sold to DeWitt Schoonmaker the old Ephraim Schoonmaker homestead, located at Accord. This old estate is one of the best watered farms in that section, and has been bought to round out a big stock farm, on account of its fine water supply.

SCARLET FEVER IN FIRE-SWEPT SALEM

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Salem, Mass., June 27.—This fire stricken city was startled afresh, when within 24 hours after the greatest conflagration in the history of New England had been put under control, three alarms were sounded for a new fire during the night which started on Derby wharf, in the ill-fated south section where Thursday's big fire started.

Intense excitement prevailed and great crowds of frenzied men and women gathered as the warning fire whistles sounded the triple alarm.

Militiamen and police were tasked to the utmost to preserve order as the blaze of the new fire lit up the skies. Meanwhile the firemen battled successfully with the flames.

A hurry call was sent for two additional companies of the Ninth regiment militia—Companies B and I of Boston—which were both on the scene early today to reinforce the militiamen already in Salem to guard against the looting and disorder growing out of the big fire.

To add to the discomfort of the refugees today was the menace of scarlet fever. Governor Walsh, accompanied by physicians investigated alarming reports of a scarlet fever outbreak and found cases in camps on Salem common and high school hill.

Discussing the fear of a scarlet fever epidemic, Governor Walsh said:

"I made a tour of the tents with Dr. Hanson and discovered that there were several cases of scarlet fever at Forest Park. He immediately took steps to isolate the victims and then began an investigation as to whether the sanitary system or lack of it or the water supply was to blame.

"Several French children had been stricken with the fever before the fire and in the fear following that calamity the sick mixed with the well with the consequence that the infection was spread.

"I do not believe that there will be an epidemic of the fever among the unfortunates who have lost their homes and positions at the same time, but I think it is best to take every possible precaution."

Scores were reported still missing today. Many of these are doubtless in the refugee camps while some are believed to have sought shelter with friends in nearby towns and cities. Mothers separated from their children, fathers from their families and children from their parents in the confusion of the fire tried in many cases vainly to effect a reunion.

An insurance adjuster, who went carefully over the fire swept area today, estimated the loss at $12,000,000, of which $10,000,000 was covered by insurance.

About 20,000 people are homeless. Nearly 2,300 refugees are in the several camps established by the state commissary department and the state medical department. Others have been given temporary homes by relatives or friends.

The state police, assisted by Salem detectives and the Metropolitan Park police, today began an investigation as to the cause of the conflagration which laid bare over a third of the city.

Thousands of dollars in checks and pledges today poured into the office of Gardner M. Lane, treasurer of the State Salem Relief Fund and by nightfall it was estimated more than $200,000 will have been raised for the relief of the stricken city.

Plans for rebuilding the burned area are very vague at this time, but it is believed that following the adjustment of insurance losses within a few days, rebuilding will be started.

Objects to Telegraph Pole.

Edward T. McGill, the wholesale produce merchant and coal dealer on Broadway near the West Shore railroad, called at police headquarters this morning and asked the police to stop the Western Union people from erecting a pole in front of his office window on the side facing the crossing as it would obstruct the light and view from the window. He was advised that it was a civil matter and not within the jurisdiction of the police. The question seems to be whether the pole was to be erected on his land or that of the railroad company. It is likely that the matter will be amicably settled between the parties concerned.

Would Like City Position.

The civil service examination for the position of engineer of the street department, fireman of the street department, and fireman of the fire department, was held on Thursday night at the city hall. J. Heppner, Marshall and E. Miller were candidates for the office of fireman of the fire department, S. Craig and Virgil Bogart for fireman of street department and F. Diamond, Everett Rider and A. Van Steenburgh for engineer of street department. One other candidate did not finish his examination.

Today was a quiet day at the city hall, there being no cases to be tried in recorder's court.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 27.—The strength which unexpectedly developed in the stock market yesterday was maintained today. Most of the important issues were higher in the first 15 minutes of trading and the opening closely followed the lead of London where Americans were supported. May Department Stores which had been carried downward in Sympathy with the Claflin failure, opened at 59 for a gain of 1½. United States Steel Common began at 60⅛ for a gain of ¼ and within half an hour was selling at 60½. Amalgamated Copper was in good demand opening at 68⅛ for an advance of ⅛. Soon it had increased its net gain to ⅝. Among the other gains were the following: Southern Pacific, ¼; Chino Copper, ½; Atchison, ⅛; Miami Copper, ⅛; Mexican Petroleum, ¼ and Erie, ⅛. Union Pacific commenced unchanged at 153⅛ but was soon influenced to higher figures. Reading was also unchanged on the first transaction but quickly rallied to 162⅜ for a gain of ⅜. Canadian Pacific and Lehigh Valley were slightly lower. The curb was firm. Americans in London were higher.

200 LIVES LOST IN JAVA EARTHQUAKE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Batavia, Java, June 27.—Latest reports received today indicate that at least 200 persons perished in the earthquake in Southern Sumatra yesterday. Twenty persons are known to have been killed in the Benkulen district, the only region in the quake zone to which communication had been restored today. Hundreds were injured, among them ten Europeans.

It was the worst quake known in Sumatra in many years.

The city of Benkulen, which was partially destroyed, is the seat of the British East India Company in Sumatra.

COLUMBIA CREW WINS GREAT RACE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 2.—What is a rowing expert? He is a man who watches six crews practicing on the Hudson river, picks five of them as possible winners and then sees the sixth and forlorn candidate romp merrily across the finish line, winner of the greatest honors that can fall to a college crew.

So it was with Columbia's victory at Poughkeepsie. No one had picked the light blue and white to defeat the Cornell crew. But they won.

To Coach Courtney of Cornell falls the sole honors of the guessing contest that preceded the race that brought together Cornell, Columbia, Pensylvania, Syracuse, Wisconsin and Washington. Before the race he said that Columbia was very fast for three miles and if they could stand the fourth mile they might win. He was right.

Jubilant over the fact that their varsity eight had won its first victory on the Hudson in 19 years, 300 Columbia University students celebrated so wildly until early today that they came into conflict with the police and fire departments of New York city.

As a result scores of the three hundred were clubbed by the policemen and the entire body was drenched by water from the hose of firemen called to extinguish a blaze that was destroying the fence of South Field on the university grounds. In his happiness, one of the students fired the fence and the firemen were called on the jump.

Before they turned their attention to the fire, however, they turned heavy streams of water on the celebrators and sent them scurrying to their rooms with the police close behind. The records follow:

'Varsity Eights.

HILTERBRANT MARRIES GIRL.

Judge Humphrey Then Suspends Sentence Upon Him.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Long Island City, June 27.—Clarence Hilterbrant, 24 years old, of Kingston, N. Y., but who has been living at 145 Greene avenue, Brooklyn, for some time past, who was convicted in the Queens County Court, Tuesday, of last week, upon the complaint of Miss Elsie Augusta Black a pretty 22-year-old telephone operator, of Grand street, Maspeth, received a suspended sentence after he was married to the girl by Judge Humphrey, in his chambers yesterday afternoon.

NOISE MUST STOP.

Premature Celebrators of the Fourth Will be Arrested.

A number of complaints have been received at the police headquarters from residents both of the upper and lower parts of Kingston, that fire crackers and other fire works are being fired off in the streets by children who find it impossible to wait until the Fourth. People who enjoy sitting on the porches evenings are very much annoyed by the reports of large fire crackers, and have asked the police to interfere. Therefore the police department wish to make it known that any one caught setting off fire crackers or anything else which causes a heavy report before the Fourth of July will be taken before the recorder and just punishment meted out to the offender.

The latest plans for the Sleightsburgh bridge have been condemned by the war department and new plans will have to be drawn by the state highway department to meet the requirements of the war department. This was the information obtained by James F. Dwyer, John Hiltebrant and Jacob Rice at Albany on Friday where they attended a hearing on the bridge plans. The plans of the proposed bridge were condemned owing to the way one of the piers would be built in the channel on the Sleightsburgh side of the creek. The war department believed that the placing of this pier would interfere with the flow of the creek.

The plans which have been condemned called for a 3 per cent grade from Wurts street and meant that the bridge would be carried over to the Sleightsburgh side of the creek and the cutting through of twenty feet of the solid rock of the hill. The hearing was held before Commissioner Ricker who has charge of the construction of all the bridges in the state. The committee also called on Commissioner Carlisle in regard to the matter.

Commissioner Ricker, after he had heard the statements made by the committee, said he did not see any objection when the new plans were drawn up to make the grade from Wurts street at least 6 per cent. If this was done it would mean that the bridge would probably be high enough to allow ordinary vessels to pass under it and in the cases of sailing vessels they would be able to go up the creek by dropping the topmast.

The matter of having the grade of the bridge increased will be taken up with the boat interests by the committee asking all interested to take the matter up with the state department.

The fact that the present plans have been condemned of course will mean a further delay in the building of the bridge.

Accord Farm Sold.

Coutant & Davis, real estate brokers of this city, have sold to DeWitt Schoonmaker the old Ephraim Schoonmaker homestead, located at Accord. This old estate is one of the best watered farms in that section, and has been bought to round out a big stock farm, on account of its fine water supply.

SCARLET FEVER IN FIRE-SWEPT SALEM

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Salem, Mass., June 27.—This fire stricken city was startled afresh, when within 24 hours after the greatest conflagration in the history of New England had been put under control, three alarms were sounded for a new fire during the night which started on Derby wharf, in the ill-fated south section where Thursday's big fire started.

Intense excitement prevailed and great crowds of frenzied men and women gathered as the warning fire whistles sounded the triple alarm.

Militiamen and police were tasked to the utmost to preserve order as the blaze of the new fire lit up the skies. Meanwhile the firemen battled successfully with the flames.

A hurry call was sent for two additional companies of the Ninth regiment militia—Companies B and I of Boston—which were both on the scene early today to reinforce the militiamen already in Salem to guard against the looting and disorder growing out of the big fire.

To add to the discomfort of the refugees today was the menace of scarlet fever. Governor Walsh, accompanied by physicians investigated alarming reports of a scarlet fever outbreak and found cases in camps on Salem common and high school hill.

Discussing the fear of a scarlet fever epidemic, Governor Walsh said:

"I made a tour of the tents with Dr. Hanson and discovered that there were several cases of scarlet fever at Forest Park. He immediately took steps to isolate the victims and then began an investigation as to whether the sanitary system or lack of it or the water supply was to blame.

"Several French children had been stricken with the fever before the fire and in the fear following that calamity the sick mixed with the well with the consequence that the infection was spread.

"I do not believe that there will be an epidemic of the fever among the unfortunates who have lost their homes and positions at the same time, but I think it is best to take every possible precaution."

Scores were reported still missing today. Many of these are doubtless in the refugee camps while some are believed to have sought shelter with friends in nearby towns and cities. Mothers separated from their children, fathers from their families and children from their parents in the confusion of the fire tried in many cases vainly to effect a reunion.

An insurance adjuster, who went carefully over the fire swept area today, estimated the loss at $12,000,000, of which $10,000,000 was covered by insurance.

About 20,000 people are homeless. Nearly 2,300 refugees are in the several camps established by the state commissary department and the state medical department. Others have been given temporary homes by relatives or friends.

The state police, assisted by Salem detectives and the Metropolitan Park police, today began an investigation as to the cause of the conflagration which laid bare over a third of the city.

Thousands of dollars in checks and pledges today poured into the office of Gardner M. Lane, treasurer of the State Salem Relief Fund and by nightfall it was estimated more than $200,000 will have been raised for the relief of the stricken city.

Plans for rebuilding the burned area are very vague at this time, but it is believed that following the adjustment of insurance losses within a few days, rebuilding will be started.

Objects to Telegraph Pole.

Edward T. McGill, the wholesale produce merchant and coal dealer on Broadway near the West Shore railroad, called at police headquarters this morning and asked the police to stop the Western Union people from erecting a pole in front of his office window on the side facing the crossing as it would obstruct the light and view from the window. He was advised that it was a civil matter and not within the jurisdiction of the police. The question seems to be whether the pole was to be erected on his land or that of the railroad company. It is likely that the matter will be amicably settled between the parties concerned.

Would Like City Position.

The civil service examination for the position of engineer of the street department, fireman of the street department, and fireman of the fire department, was held on Thursday night at the city hall. J. Heppner, Marshall and E. Miller were candidates for the office of fireman of the fire department, S. Craig and Virgil Bogart for fireman of street department and F. Diamond, Everett Rider and A. Van Steenburgh for engineer of street department. One other candidate did not finish his examination.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 27.—The strength which unexpectedly developed in the stock market yesterday was maintained today. Most of the important issues were higher in the first 15 minutes of trading and the opening closely followed the lead of London where Americans were supported. May Department Stores which had been carried downward in Sympathy with the Claflin failure, opened at 59 for a gain of 1½. United States Steel Common began at 60⅛ for a gain of ¼ and within half an hour was selling at 60½. Amalgamated Copper was in good demand opening at 68⅛ for an advance of ⅛. Soon it had increased its net gain to ⅝. Among the other gains were the following: Southern Pacific, ¼; Chino Copper, ½; Atchison, ⅛; Miami Copper, ⅛; Mexican Petroleum, ¼ and Erie, ⅛. Union Pacific commenced unchanged at 153⅛ but was soon influenced to higher figures. Reading was also unchanged on the first transaction but quickly rallied to 162⅜ for a gain of ⅜. Canadian Pacific and Lehigh Valley were slightly lower. The curb was firm. Americans in London were higher.

Viaduct Viewed by Commission.

The viaduct commission composed of J. DePuy Hasbrouck, John S. Thompson and J. H. Duffy met at the court house Friday morning at 10 o'clock. It was expected that the claims that had been settled would be reviewed by the commission, but as the weather was very favorable the commission thought it advisable to view the properties that were damaged. Practically all of the properties were looked over and the viaduct construction explained by the city engineer. Where the sidewalk of the viaduct and the walk of Washington avenue meet stands an old tree and it is planned to circle around it, thus saving the tree. Some of the commissioners thought that as the tree was in very poor condition it would be better to remove it, thus having a straight, continuous walk. The commission adjourned at the viaduct until July 8, when they will meet at the court house at 10 o'clock.

MOTORCYCLIST KILLED FRIDAY AT HIGHLAND

Oliver Williams of Milton was killed at Highland Friday afternoon when he ran his motorcycle into the automobile owned and operated by H. H. Hallock, which was coming in an opposite direction.

Williams was riding his motorcycle up the Highland hill and met Hallock, who was on his way to Milton, about a mile and a half below the village. Williams was on the wrong side of the road, and Hallock signalled to him to pass to the left. Williams also signalled for Hallock to pass to the left.

Before the autoist and the cyclist could determine their courses, Williams's motorcycle struck Hallock's machine in about the center and he was thrown off.

Judson DeWitt, who was on a motorcycle, was a short distance ahead of Williams, and Hallock shouted to him to stop, but DeWitt evidently did not hear him. Hallock and Leon J. Quick, who was with him, placed Williams in Hallock's machine and procured Dr. Ransburgh. They hurried aboard the Poughkeepsie ferry and were lifting Williams into an ambulance from Vassar Hospital when he expired. Examination disclosed bruises and cuts on the breast, chin and forehead, and it is thought that his neck was broken.

Williams was a well driver and had resided at Milton for a number of years. He married a Miss Ferguson of Milton and she survives him with seven children.

JOY RIDERS COME TO GRIEF.

Automobile Truck Upset and the Riders Quickly Disappear.

Thursday night a Greek fruit merchant arrived in New Paltz with a new automobile truck he had just bought. With him was his chauffeur. The truck was left under the shed of George E. Johnston & Son and later in the evening the chauffeur and another man took it out for a trip. Up the street they picked up a party of newly made acquaintances and proceeded for a joy ride toward Highland. At Lloyd the truck ran off the road and upset. The entire party made themselves scarce and the owner of the machine is arranging to have it repaired.

Baseball at High Falls.

High Falls, June 27.—The fast High Falls team defeated the All Wilbur baseball team at High Falls on Sunday, June 21, by the score of 11 to 5. Wilbur used two pitchers against the local team but could not win. Crispell and O'Neil were the battery for High Falls. The home club will play the Mercury baseball club of Kingston Sunday, June 28. This game will decide which wins the second out of three games, as each team has won one game so far this season. The High Falls club has won seven straight games this season and only lost one. They gave a dance on Thursday, June 25 in the B. W. S. hall in honor of the good work done by the club on the diamond.

HUERTA READY TO RETIRE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Mediation Headquarters, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 27.—Following the receipt of dispatches from Mexico City, Senor Luis Elguero, of the Mexican peace delegation held a long conference with Minister Suarez, of Chile, one of the three mediators at which he is believed to have announced President Huerta's willingness to retire in favor of any of the civil leaders among the Constitutionalists.

Huerta's promise also is said to have contained the condition that the provisional presidency should not be given to General Villa, General Carranza, General Angeles, or any other of the military chiefs.

It is believed that Huerta would retire at once in favor of Luis Cabrera. The unbroken series of Federal defeats, the last of which was inflicted at Zacatecas, seems to have borne in upon Huerta the futility of opposing the victorious Constitutionalists at Mexico City.

Before the Huertista delegates make any final agreement, however, they will insist upon terms which will guarantee general amnesty for all the Federal forces and pledges that all registered titles to land shall stand unimpaired.

INTERESTING WILL CASE.

Destroying Second Will Did Not Validate a Former Will.

An important decision was handed down Friday by the appellate division of the second department, in Brooklyn, in an interesting case which has attracted considerable attention among Ulster county lawyers.

Maria Eva Kuntz of Brooklyn made a will on July 17, 1912, by which she gave certain real estate to one daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Kille. Later Mrs. Kuntz had a disagreement with Mrs. Kille and made another will by which she disposed of the property among other children. After the second will had been made, Mrs. Kuntz and Mrs. Kille adjusted their differences, and Mrs. Kuntz decided that she preferred to have the first will stand. She visited the lawyer who had drawn the two wills and told him that fact. He was a witness to both wills. In his presence she tore up the second will and announced that she desired the first will probated after her death.

The second will contained the usual clause revoking all previous wills. Surrogate Ketcham of Kings county admitted the first will to probate, and Jonathan Deyo of New York city, a brother of Daniel B. Deyo of this city, appealed from the surrogate's decision on behalf of the other children.

The appellate division holds that the first will should not have been admitted to probate. It was revoked by the second will, and it was not reinstated by the mere act of destroying the second will, because the formalities required in the execution of a will were not complied with. The statement of the testatrix that she desired the first will to stand, after the same had been revoked, was made in the presence of only one of the witnesses to that will, and the appellate division holds that such action was insufficient to reinstate the first will, that a will having once been revoked cannot be reinstated and revived except in the same manner that it was originally made, that it must be published and declared to be the last will in the presence of the two original witnesses.

The estate of Mrs. Kuntz now stands as though she had died without making a will, and letters of administration must be issued to the proper person.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Miss Mildred Lawrence and Miss Marie Schnitzler are in Albany today attending the wedding of Miss Rachel Anne Griswold and Gerald Southworth Pratt. Miss Griswold and Mr. Pratt are both graduates of this year's class at the State College for Teachers and Mr. Pratt was president of the class.

Miss Alice Lyons was delightfully entertained by a number of friends at the home of her aunt Mrs. Cobb, 67 Van Buren street, Friday evening in honor of her graduation. Games were played and dancing was enjoyed by her many friends. the music being furnished by Miss M. Cobb. A table was set for eighteen and all enjoyed the menu set forth by her aunt. Those present were: Edna Schepmoes, Hester Auringer, Carrie Robins, Susan Cockburn, Ethel Rose, Margaret Herbert, Miriam Potts, Harry Freer, Harold Cunningham, Edward Relyea, Chester Weeks, David Hackett, Eugene Gleason, James O'Leary, Edward Murray, John Gue.

Mrs. John Kellerman delightfully entertained the Immanuel Sewing Circle of the Livingston Street Lutheran Church at her home, 172 Flatbush avenue. Those present were Mrs. Heppner, Mrs. Meyer, Mrs. G. Tietjen, Mrs. J. Kreuger, Mrs. Dasher, Mrs. Topp, Mrs. Demgen, Mrs. F. Wiederman, Mrs. Schleede, Mrs. Studt, Mrs. Koch, Mrs. Marquardt, Mrs. Teichler, Mrs. Ehnes, Mrs. Wilhelm, Mrs. C. Petrie, Mrs. M. Studt, Mrs. Shuberg, Mrs. Gronemeyer and Miss Schuster, honored guest from Philadelphia. After business was transacted light refreshments were served and all the guests present pronounced the hostess a royal entertainer.

Carrell-Thomas.

Miss Marie Carrell, daughter of C. J. Carrell of Washington, Pa., and Raymond Thomas, son of H. W. Thomas, of No. 144 West Pierpont street, this city, were quietly married at the Christian Church, Winter Haven, Fla., June 4, by the Rev. Mr. McKeever. After a wedding supper given by the bride's sister, Mrs. W. F. Pickett, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas motored to Bartow, Lakeland, Tampa and St. Petersburg, Fla., and returning will reside in a newly furnished residence at Winter Haven, Fla., where the groom is interested in the painting and decorating firm of Gill & Thomas.

Seniors Entertain Juniors.

St. Joseph's Hall was the scene of an unusually pretty dance, given last evening by the graduates of Kingston Academy to the Juniors of the same school. The only decorations were the big K. A. banner and the class banner of 1914, giving to the hall a splendid air of roominess. Muller's orchestra of five pieces furnished delightful music. During the evening punch was enjoyed between dances and the guests repaired to Wiltwyck Inn for more substantial refreshments. The dance orders were ever so pretty, being like the Class Day programs, having on the cover an embossed daisy, the class flower. The committee having the dance in charge were the Misses Georgia Schick, Ruth Glendenning and Eileen Keefe. Those who chaperoned the dance were Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Glendenning, Mrs. Schick, Mrs. Gill, Mrs. Canfield and Mrs. Smith. About a hundred young people enjoyed the dance, the young ladies being especially charming in their dainty evening gowns.

Koons-Scofield.

The marriage of Mrs. Alice LeFevre Scofield of Milton to A. J. Koons of Highland took place on Thursday, June 25 at 2 o'clock at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. G. A. Wendell, 46 West 93rd street, New York city, the Rev. Dr. F. A. Scofield, brother-in-law of the bride, officiating. After an elaborate collation, served by Maresi, during which musicians played soft, dreamy music, Mr. and Mrs. Koons took the 4 o'clock train for Niagara Falls, where they will remain a week and later will go abroad, visiting many noted places in Europe. There were no cards. The wedding was a strictly private affair, only the immediate family being present. The bride was gowned in gray satin charmeuse, draped with gray silk and net over white lace and chiffon, with sprays of orange blossoms, large shower bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley. The house was tastefully decorated with a profusion of pink and white roses and smilax under wide spreading palms. Mrs. Koons was the daughter of Jonathan LeFevre and Catherine DuBois Wurts, and granddaughter of the late Dr. Jacob Wurts of New Paltz. In 1888 she was married to George T. Scofield of Milton, who died in 1898. Mr. Koons is a retired farmer and fruit grower and one of Highland's most prominent men. His first wife, who was Miss Mary Palmertier, died in 1912. Mr. and Mrs. Koons are both staunch Presbyterians and have the best wishes of their many friends.

Auto Cuts up Capers.

This morning "Billy" Van Bramer's automobile driven by a young man cut up some queer capers on the Strand. The machine had just turned into the Strand from Ferry street when in some manner the driver lost control of the steering wheel and it dashed up on the sidewalk in front of Louis Herold's junk store. The driver managed to throw on the brakes, bringing the car to a stop before it crashed into the store front. After some trouble the car was backed off the sidewalk into the road and continued on up the street.

MOTORCAR PROGRESS.

Standardization of the Parts and What That Means.

Ask any engineer what feature of modern motorcar construction represents the greatest improvement and advancement in design, and he will say not the automatic engine starter, the six cylinder engine, but standardization.

That may be a word which means but little to the car owner, but he unconsciously derives untold benefit from it every day that he runs his automobile. By reason of it he has only to ask for a certain kind of spark plug and he knows it will fit the cylinder, he has only a dozen or so different sizes of tires from which to select the one adapted to his car, and even the carburetor may be replaced by one of a different make without any change whatsoever in the bolt holes or attaching flange.

A vital part of the motor or running gear may be replaced by a blacksmith or local machine shop from the ordinary sizes of stock carried on hand, and the screw thread sizes as now used conform to a certain standard that renders replacements exceedingly simple. Grease cups, nuts or bolts that may have been lost may be replaced at the nearest supply store or garage, for no longer does each manufacturer work only to his own specifications on these minor parts.—H. W. Slauson, M. E., in Leslie's.

LOST HIS BAROMETER.

Count Zeppelin Says General Butterfield Sneaked It Away.

Count Zeppelin, the inventor of the dirigible balloon, is not a stranger to the United States, for he saw service with the Union army in the war between the states. In his recently published reminiscences he tells this amusing story of General Butterfield, who was chief of staff in the Army of the Potomac:

In planning operations General Butterfield attached special significance to knowledge of the probable weather conditions, and for this reason he became especially fond of an excellent aneroid barometer that I had obtained from London and paid a lot of money for.

He saw this instrument in my tent, borrowed it from me, then found it impossible to give it up. He kept it a longer time each time he borrowed it until at last he failed to return it at all. When I was about to leave the army I asked him again and again to return it, and I finally became so pressing that he said he would go to his tent and fetch it out.

After waiting outside a long time I followed him into the tent. It was empty. With my barometer in his hand he had crawled under the canvas and disappeared.

No Chance for Father.

MOTORCYCLIST KILLED FRIDAY AT HIGHLAND

Oliver Williams of Milton was killed at Highland Friday afternoon when he ran his motorcycle into the automobile owned and operated by H. H. Hallock, which was coming in an opposite direction.

Williams was riding his motorcycle up the Highland hill and met Hallock, who was on his way to Milton, about a mile and a half below the village. Williams was on the wrong side of the road, and Hallock signalled to him to pass to the left. Williams also signalled for Hallock to pass to the left.

Before the autoist and the cyclist could determine their courses, Williams's motorcycle struck Hallock's machine in about the center and he was thrown off.

Judson DeWitt, who was on a motorcycle, was a short distance ahead of Williams, and Hallock shouted to him to stop, but DeWitt evidently did not hear him. Hallock and Leon J. Quick, who was with him, placed Williams in Hallock's machine and procured Dr. Ransburgh. They hurried aboard the Poughkeepsie ferry and were lifting Williams into an ambulance from Vassar Hospital when he expired. Examination disclosed bruises and cuts on the breast, chin and forehead, and it is thought that his neck was broken.

Williams was a well driver and had resided at Milton for a number of years. He married a Miss Ferguson of Milton and she survives him with seven children.

JOY RIDERS COME TO GRIEF.

Automobile Truck Upset and the Riders Quickly Disappear.

Thursday night a Greek fruit merchant arrived in New Paltz with a new automobile truck he had just bought. With him was his chauffeur. The truck was left under the shed of George E. Johnston & Son and later in the evening the chauffeur and another man took it out for a trip. Up the street they picked up a party of newly made acquaintances and proceeded for a joy ride toward Highland. At Lloyd the truck ran off the road and upset. The entire party made themselves scarce and the owner of the machine is arranging to have it repaired.

HEAD OF DRY GOODS HOUSE WHICH IS IN FINANCIAL TROUBLE.

(John Claflin.)

New York, June 27.—The noted wholesale dry goods house of H. B. Claflin & Companies, which also controls numerous big department stores, went into the hands of receivers here June 25. John B. Claflin, head of the H. B. Claflin Company, stated that the receivership had become necessary because the expansion of the business had occasioned capital requirement which the company could not meet. The company is said to have several millions of dollars in outstanding obligations, several of which are past due, and that the firm has not financial resources to meet these obligations. The H. B. Claflin Company is a $9,000,000 corporation and one of the foremost dry goods firms in the United States.

HUERTA READY TO RETIRE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Mediation Headquarters, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 27.—Following the receipt of dispatches from Mexico City, Senor Luis Elguero, of the Mexican peace delegation held a long conference with Minister Suarez, of Chile, one of the three mediators at which he is believed to have announced President Huerta's willingness to retire in favor of any of the civil leaders among the Constitutionalists.

Huerta's promise also is said to have contained the condition that the provisional presidency should not be given to General Villa, General Carranza, General Angeles, or any other of the military chiefs.

It is believed that Huerta would retire at once in favor of Luis Cabrera. The unbroken series of Federal defeats, the last of which was inflicted at Zacatecas, seems to have borne in upon Huerta the futility of opposing the victorious Constitutionalists at Mexico City.

Before the Huertista delegates make any final agreement, however, they will insist upon terms which will guarantee general amnesty for all the Federal forces and pledges that all registered titles to land shall stand unimpaired.

INTERESTING WILL CASE.

Destroying Second Will Did Not Validate a Former Will.

An important decision was handed down Friday by the appellate division of the second department, in Brooklyn, in an interesting case which has attracted considerable attention among Ulster county lawyers.

Maria Eva Kuntz of Brooklyn made a will on July 17, 1912, by which she gave certain real estate to one daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Kille. Later Mrs. Kuntz had a disagreement with Mrs. Kille and made another will by which she disposed of the property among other children. After the second will had been made, Mrs. Kuntz and Mrs. Kille adjusted their differences, and Mrs. Kuntz decided that she preferred to have the first will stand. She visited the lawyer who had drawn the two wills and told him that fact. He was a witness to both wills. In his presence she tore up the second will and announced that she desired the first will probated after her death.

The second will contained the usual clause revoking all previous wills. Surrogate Ketcham of Kings county admitted the first will to probate, and Jonathan Deyo of New York, a brother of Daniel B. Deyo of this city, appealed from the surrogate's decision on behalf of the other children.

The appellate division holds that the first will should not have been admitted to probate. It was revoked by the second will, and it was not reinstated by the mere act of destroying the second will, because the formalities required in the execution of a will were not complied with. The statement of the testatrix that she desired the first will to stand, after the same had been revoked, was made in the presence of only one of the witnesses to that will, and the appellate division holds that such action was insufficient to reinstate the first will, that a will having once been revoked cannot be reinstated and revived except in the same manner that it was originally made, that it must be published and declared to be the last will in the presence of the two original witnesses.

The estate of Mrs. Kuntz now stands as though she had died without making a will, and letters of administration must be issued to the proper person.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Miss Mildred Lawrence and Miss Marie Schnitzler are in Albany today attending the wedding of Miss Rachel Anne Griswold and Gerald Southworth Pratt. Miss Griswold and Mr. Pratt are both graduates of this year's class at the State College for Teachers and Mr. Pratt was president of the class.

Miss Alice Lyons was delightfully entertained by a number of friends at the home of her aunt Mrs. Cobb, 67 Van Buren street, Friday evening in honor of her graduation. Games were played and dancing was enjoyed by her many friends. the music being furnished by Miss M. Cobb. A table was set for eighteen and all enjoyed the menu set forth by her aunt. Those present were: Edna Schepmoes, Hester Auringer, Carrie Robins, Susan Cockburn, Ethel Rose, Margaret Herbert, Miriam Potts, Harry Freer, Harold Cunningham, Edward Relyea, Chester Weeks, David Hackett, Eugene Gleason, James O'Leary, Edward Murray, John Gue.

Mrs. John Kellerman delightfully entertained the Immanuel Sewing Circle of the Livingston Street Lutheran Church at her home, 172 Flatbush avenue. Those present were Mrs. Heppner, Mrs. Meyer, Mrs. G. Tietjen, Mrs. J. Kreuger, Mrs. Dasher, Mrs. Topp, Mrs. Demgen, Mrs. F. Wiederman, Mrs. Schleede, Mrs. Studt, Mrs. Koch, Mrs. Marquardt, Mrs. Teichler, Mrs. Ehnes, Mrs. Wilhelm, Mrs. C. Petrie, Mrs. M. Studt, Mrs. Shuberg, Mrs. Gronemeyer and Miss Schuster, honored guest from Philadelphia. After business was transacted light refreshments were served and all the guests present pronounced the hostess a royal entertainer.

Carrell-Thomas.

Miss Marie Carrell, daughter of C. J. Carrell of Washington, Pa., and Raymond Thomas, son of H. W. Thomas, of No. 144 West Pierpont street, this city, were quietly married at the Christian Church, Winter Haven, Fla., June 4, by the Rev. Mr. McKeever. After a wedding supper given by the bride's sister, Mrs. W. F. Pickett, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas motored to Bartow, Lakeland, Tampa and St. Petersburg, Fla., and returning will reside in a newly furnished residence at Winter Haven, Fla., where the groom is interested in the painting and decorating firm of Gill & Thomas.

Seniors Entertain Juniors.

St. Joseph's Hall was the scene of an unusually pretty dance, given last evening by the graduates of Kingston Academy to the Juniors of the same school. The only decorations were the big K. A. banner and the class banner of 1914, giving to the hall a splendid air of roominess. Muller's orchestra of five pieces furnished delightful music. During the evening punch was enjoyed between dances and the guests repaired to Wiltwyck Inn for more substantial refreshments. The dance orders were ever so pretty, being like the Class Day programs, saving on the cover an embossed daisy, the class flower. The committee having the dance in charge were the Misses Georgia Schick, Ruth Glendenning and Eileen Keefe. Those who chaperoned the dance were Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Glendenning, Mrs. Schick, Mrs. Gill, Mrs. Canfield and Mrs. Smith. About a hundred young people enjoyed the dance, the young ladies being especially charming in their dainty evening gowns.

Koons-Scofield.

The marriage of Mrs. Alice LeFevre Scofield of Milton to A. J. Koons of Highland took place on Thursday, June 25 at 2 o'clock at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. G. A. Wendell, 46 West 93rd street, New York city, the Rev. Dr. F. A. Scofield, brother-in-law of the bride, officiating. After an elaborate collation, served by Maresi, during which musicians played soft, dreamy music, Mr. and Mrs. Koons took the 4 o'clock train for Niagara Falls, where they will remain a week and later will go abroad, visiting many noted places in Europe. There were no cards. The wedding was a strictly private affair, only the immediate family being present. The bride was gowned in gray satin charmeuse, draped with gray silk and net over white lace and chiffon, with sprays of orange blossoms, large shower bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley. The house was tastefully decorated with a profusion of pink and white roses and smilax under wide spreading palms. Mrs. Koons was the daughter of Jonathan LeFevre and Catherine DuBois Wurts, and granddaughter of the late Dr. Jacob Wurts of New Paltz. In 1888 she was married to George T. Scofield of Milton, who died in 1898. Mr. Koons is a retired farmer and fruit grower and one of Highland's most prominent men. His first wife, who was Miss Mary Palmertier, died in 1912. Mr. and Mrs. Koons are both staunch Presbyterians and have the best wishes of their many friends.

Auto Cuts up Capers.

This morning "Billy" Van Bramer's automobile driven by a young man cut up some queer capers on the Strand. The machine had just turned into the Strand from Ferry street when in some manner the driver lost control of the steering wheel and it dashed up on the sidewalk in front of Louis Herold's junk store. The driver managed to throw on the brakes, bringing the car to a stop before it crashed into the store front. After some trouble the car was backed off the sidewalk into the road and continued on up the street.

MOTORCAR PROGRESS.

Standardization of the Parts and What That Means.

Ask any engineer what feature of modern motorcar construction represents the greatest improvement and advancement in design, and he will say not the automatic engine starter, the six cylinder engine, but standardization.

That may be a word which means but little to the car owner, but he unconsciously derives untold benefit from it every day that he runs his automobile. By reason of it he has only to ask for a certain kind of spark plug and he knows it will fit the cylinder, he has only a dozen or so different sizes of tires from which to select the one adapted to his car, and even the carburetor may be replaced by one of a different make without any change whatsoever in the bolt holes or attaching flange.

A vital part of the motor or running gear may be replaced by a blacksmith or local machine shop from the ordinary sizes of stock carried on hand, and the screw thread sizes as now used conform to a certain standard that renders replacements exceedingly simple. Grease cups, nuts or bolts that may have been lost may be replaced at the nearest supply store or garage, for no longer does each manufacturer work only to his own specifications on these minor parts.—H. W. Slauson, M. E., in Leslie's.

LOST HIS BAROMETER.

Count Zeppelin Says General Butterfield Sneaked It Away.

Count Zeppelin, the inventor of the dirigible balloon, is not a stranger to the United States, for he saw service with the Union army in the war between the states. In his recently published reminiscences he tells this amusing story of General Butterfield, who was chief of staff in the Army of the Potomac:

In planning operations General Butterfield attached special significance to knowledge of the probable weather conditions, and for this reason he became especially fond of an excellent aneroid barometer that I had obtained from London and paid a lot of money for.

He saw this instrument in my tent, borrowed it from me, then found it impossible to give it up. He kept it a longer time each time he borrowed it until at last he failed to return it at all. When I was about to leave the army I asked him again and again to return it, and I finally became so pressing that he said he would go to his tent and fetch it out.

After waiting outside a long time I followed him into the tent. It was empty. With my barometer in his hand he had crawled under the canvas and disappeared.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 27, 1914.

Chairman Barnes of the Republican State Committee, in spite of the fact that Colonel Roosevelt, with unconscious humor, calls him a "boss," declines to promote or oppose at this time any Republican aspirant for the office of Governor. He has issued a statement that on Primary Day, September 28, he will cast his ballot for whomever seems to him to be the "most capable man," and adds: "Who that man may be I cannot tell until the eighth day of September, when the list of candidates will be closed. It is the duty of every other Republican in the State to approach his primary ballot with the same attitude of mind." We endorse this sentiment heartily. It is early yet to express preferences, since circumstances have a way of changing surprisingly in a few months. Meanwhile, the frantic efforts of Bull Moose leaders to force the nomination by the Republicans of some one favorable to their wild theories is both ridiculous and impudent.

The big convention of associated advertising clubs at Toronto has naturally stimulated interest in the whole subject of publicity. One of the points most frequently discussed by people in general is where the money comes from to pay for all the big advertisements in newspapers, in street cars, on billboards and so on. The kind of advertising which expresses itself in window displays is also very expensive in the aggregate. All these millions come out of somebody—that is clear. They don't come out of the pockets of consumers, that is certain, because experience shows that advertised goods are always better and cheaper than [illegible] expenditure surely does not diminish the bank balances of advertisers, since they prosper the more the more they spend. Nevertheless, somebody pays. Study the question from all angles, and you are bound to reach the conclusion that the bills are paid in the end, indirectly, by the merchant who does not advertise. His wideawake competitors are steadily getting his customers and profits away from him. Buying in smaller quantities, he cannot get as good wholesale prices, and consequently cannot attract trade with special bargains. This will strike many people as a preposterous theory, but if they think it over a little while they will subscribe to it.

If all vehicles had to pay a tax, the same as automobiles, the amount being adjusted proportionately to the use derived from and the wear and tear done to the roads, no less than $130,000,000 per year would be raised, according to a computation made under the authority of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. This amount is more than three times as much as the total of State funds for road work in 1914. Motorists have long protested against the injustice of discriminating against them. Of course, they should pay more than the users of slower moving vehicles, because they do more damage to the roads, but the others should not escape entirely. No sensible argument can be advanced against the proposition that the roads should be kept up by the general public or else by those who use them. A mixture of these two methods is undesirable. Originally, the automobile tax, like the income tax, was adopted because it was supposed that it would hit only wealthy persons, but even that argument, poor as it is, no longer has any force, because motor cars have become so cheap that the vast majority of owners are persons whom it is not within the bounds of permissible exaggeration to call rich.

The leaders of the woman suffragists in this State are making an effort to have all the parties in certain districts unite in electing women delegates to the Constitutional Convention. They have a feeling that mere men lack the ability to frame a proper Constitution for the Empire State, and that they can succeed only with the aid of women. Attorney General Carmody has rendered an opinion that the Convention will itself be the sole judge of the qualifications of its members, and if women should be elected as delegates it is unimaginable that they would be unseated. It would be hard to find a Senatorial district in this State in which the voters could be convinced that the feminine mind is better fitted than the masculine to the building of constitutions, so that it will require some conspiring of party leaders and some wire-pulling in order that women be elected, but we think the end might justify the means. While we should like to see our own district represented as strongly as possible, we hope that the experiment will be tried elsewhere. The most competent suffragist in the State ought to be elected, so that the people can learn by experience, while reading the reports of the proceedings, just how valuable female assistance is in this kind of work. Then we will all know just how to vote on the suffrage section of the Constitution when it is submitted.

HER LETTER.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

Awhile ago a big metropolitan newspaper published a letter written by a woman in St. Petersburg, Russia. She had sent it in the hope that it might perchance catch the eye of her son, who had been a student in the St. Petersburg University and had disappeared, with no trace to indicate whither or for how long.

The letter pathetically indicated a fear that he might be dead and prayed for some news that her dread might be allayed. It was no hint at all that she knew the why for his going, except that in the closing words she gave her "mother's word" that she would not attempt to force his free decision in anything, and that he might ask for whatever he liked, sure all the while that he had "one true friend, your mother."

It is quite impossible to read between the lines and guess at all accurately whether the son had been accustomed to ask overmuch or whether the mother had been too zealous in impressing herself and her opinions upon a young man soon to be ready to step into real life and to think and act for himself.

The most that appears to a certainty is that it is an unmindful son and a son with no great promise of manhood ahead, who wilfully slips away into the untried world without an apparent care or a thought of the mother left behind, whose love is mighty, whatever her weakness may be.

But as one reads her desperate willingness to yield when the time has come that she does not know whether he is living or dead, or perhaps has sailed overseas, and dating, the thought comes once again that many of the heartaches of the world would be lost on the way, many others greatly lessened if all of us would consistently try to think out our problems to a finish.

And that mother, waiting for news that may flash any minute or that may be delayed forever and forever—has she handled her problem the wrong way?

For there are sons and there are daughters who easily rebel when the guiding-hand is pretty firm, so firm, perhaps, that there is little room for free decisions of their own. They may be right in their rebellion or they may be wrong, but there surely are times when it is well even for parents to meet their children half way, when it comes to questions where yielding is possible. And the times come rather often to parents and to us all when prudence ought to bid us move with greatest care. For it is one thing to be firm and unyielding in a matter that seems very big and important and one-sided; but, alas! it is quite another when there is a fateful price to pay for carrying the point.

To insist that a son or a daughter or a husband or a wife or a somebody else follow a way that seems to one right is all very well up to a certain point; but when the mind of the son or the daughter, the husband, the wife, the somebody else, is turned in another direction, it is time to reckon upon results—will it pay to carry the struggle to a finish? In the case of that mother waiting in Russia, whatever the issue at stake, quite evidently it did not pay.

Is it a marriage of which a parent does not approve? Well, the objections may be very well founded, but after all, when the last wise caution has been uttered, the rest only leads to bitterness, to possible estrangement and perhaps silence forever. And does it pay? That is for the parent to say, but in the majority of cases, one observes that when an open break has been made, the yielding comes in the end, after a long period of bitterness that is never quite healed.

And is it the choice of a business, a profession, a calling in life, where notions and wills are a-clash? Many a father and many a mother have tried to force their own preferences upon sons, only to find at the last that the sons have slipped away, perhaps to join the army, perhaps to some other place of their choice, with never a word, never a hint of their going, and without a sign of regret.

Nobody wonders that parents object many times, and that husbands and wives and the rest of folk find sound enough reasons for taking an earnest stand—but when the last count is made it is often found that the continued objections have not paid.

For it is pathetic, if not worse, at the last to be found ready to yield everything if only there is a chance to begin all over again. For that chance many times is missing.

STONE CRUSHER OUTPUT.

Even Better Work Than Shown in The Freeman's Figures.

Editor Freeman:

In your issue of June 24 appeared an item in connection with "work done by the street force," which stated that "one day recently 85 tons of stone was crushed, which sets a record for crushing stone at the city plant." The above statement is a slight error of figures, as on that day 114 tons of stone was crushed, as can be seen from the fact that 82 cart loads of stone were hauled to crusher and crushed. Each cart load averaged over 2,800 pounds. The crushing plant averages 100 tons of stone crushed daily.

HURLEY.

Hurley, June 27.—Two of the young ladies of the village are to be reckoned among the "sweet girl graduates" of the season. Miss Ethel Elmendorf, has just finished the course of study at New Paltz Normal School with distinction and returned home on Thursday after the graduation festivities of the week. Miss Ellen Smith finishes the course of study at Ulster Academy and is enjoying the festivities accompanying the graduation exercises of the class.

Ray Elmendorf and Alexander Gibson with two friends went by automobile to New Paltz on Wednesday where they attended the graduation exercises as guests of Miss Ethel Elmendorf.

A number of the village folks attended the auction at Cantines Bridge on Wednesday. There was quite a fair attendance enjoying the occasion.

George P. Dumond has gone to Walton to attend the gathering of the Dumond clan at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Van Sickle have returned from a short visit to Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The well at Dr. Loughran's bungalow, "The Knoll" is now 157 feet deep; as there is a fine flow of water no further attempt will be made to go deeper.

Another automobile has come to the village. Grant Smith is enjoying the pleasures of motoring in a Studebaker car.

Everybody is congratulating A. G. DeWitt upon the arrival of his granddaughter, who has just arrived in Brooklyn. It is hoped she will come to Hurley during the summer.

Double Header on Sunday.

There will be a double header on McVey's field on Sunday afternoon when two fast games of baseball will be played. The first game will be called at one o'clock when the Barmann A. C. and the Local baseball team will clash. At 3:30 the Red Monograms will clash with the Manhattan Red Sox of New York city. The latter team is considered one of the fastest amateur teams playing in this section of the state. The Monograms have won thirteen straight games and except to annex another scalp on Sunday.

GEORGE KELDER BADLY INJURED

The many friends of George Kelder, formerly of this city, now of the firm of Hicks & Kelder, taxicab service of Schenectady, will regret to learn that Mr. Kelder recently met with a serious and all but fatal accident. Mr. Kelder was driving one of the firm's finest cars, a Cadillac, with three passengers, when the car collided with a D. F. H. train on the Albany road. The passengers escaped with bad bruises, while Mr. Kelder was less fortunate, breaking his leg. Fortunately the passengers jumped, for the car was practically a total wreck. Those who saw the accident said that the train neither blew a whistle nor rang a bell though the crossing is a bad one, the tracks being hidden by trees, etc. After the accident, however, the train stopped and took the passengers and Mr. Kelder to Schenectady.

Kingston Lodge, No. 10, F. and A. M., will celebrate St. John's Day by attending the evening service of the First Reformed Church in a body. Rondout Lodge, No. 543, and many out of town Masonic friends have been invited and will be present. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. P. C. Penny of Schenectady, who is well known by the Masons of the city. Dr. Penny is the chaplain of St. George's Lodge of Schenectady, and as will be remembered, made the formal presentation speech of the Traveling Bible, which was brought by St. George's Lodge to this order last November. The main body of the church will be reserved for the Masonic orders and the Clinton Chapter, O. E. S., and the rest of the church for others who wish to attend. The organist of the church, W. W. Fredenburgh, has arranged a special musical program for this occasion.

(Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley.)

Washington, June 27.—Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, will be one of the three woman who will be received by President Wilson at 2:15 o'clock, June 30, when he receives a deputation of clubwomen. The executive was waited upon by Mrs. William Kent, Mrs. Gilson Gardner and Mrs. Wiley. He said he would be glad to receive the women, and much to the pleasure of the delegation, fixed no time limited for the interview. The mass meeting at the public library, at which time short speeches will be made, will be held at 1 o'clock. From there the women will march directly to the president's office. It is said that the deputation will be the largest that ever visited the capital.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 27, 1914.

Chairman Barnes of the Republican State Committee, in spite of the fact that Colonel Roosevelt, with unconscious humor, calls him a "boss," declines to promote or oppose at this time any Republican aspirant for the office of Governor. He has issued a statement that on Primary Day, September 28, he will cast his ballot for whomever seems to him to be the "most capable man," and adds: "Who that man may be I cannot tell until the eighth day of September, when the list of candidates will be closed. It is the duty of every other Republican in the State to approach his primary ballot with the same attitude of mind." We endorse this sentiment heartily. It is early yet to express preferences, since circumstances have a way of changing surprisingly in a few months. Meanwhile, the frantic efforts of Bull Moose leaders to force the nomination by the Republicans of some one favorable to their wild theories is both ridiculous and impudent.

The big convention of associated advertising clubs at Toronto has naturally stimulated interest in the whole subject of publicity. One of the points most frequently discussed by people in general is where the money comes from to pay for all the big advertisements in newspapers, in street cars, on billboards and so on. The kind of advertising which expresses itself in window displays is also very expensive in the aggregate. All these millions come out of somebody—that is clear. They don't come out of the pockets of consumers, that is certain, because experience shows that advertised goods are always better and cheaper than others. Nor surely does not diminish the bank balances of advertisers, since they prosper the more the more they spend. Nevertheless, somebody pays. Study the question from all angles, and you are bound to reach the conclusion that the bills are paid in the end, indirectly, by the merchant who does not advertise. His wideawake competitors are steadily getting his customers and profits away from him. Buying in smaller quantities, he cannot get as good wholesale prices, and consequently cannot attract trade with special bargains. This will strike many people as a preposterous theory, but if they think it over a little while they will subscribe to it.

If all vehicles had to pay a tax, the same as automobiles, the amount being adjusted proportionately to the use derived from and the wear and tear done to the roads, no less than $130,000,000 per year would be raised, according to a computation made under the authority of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. This amount is more than three times as much as the total of State funds for road work in 1914. Motorists have long protested against the injustice of discriminating against them. Of course, they should pay more than the users of slower moving vehicles, because they do more damage to the roads, but the others should not escape entirely. No sensible argument can be advanced against the proposition that the roads should be kept up by the general public or else by those who use them. A mixture of these two methods is undesirable. Originally, the automobile tax, like the income tax, was adopted because it was supposed that it would hit only wealthy persons, but even that argument, poor as it is, no longer has any force, because motor cars have become so cheap that the vast majority of owners are persons whom it is not within the bounds of permissible exaggeration to call rich.

The leaders of the woman suffragists in this State are making an effort to have all the parties in certain districts unite in electing women delegates to the Constitutional Convention. They have a feeling that mere men lack the ability to frame a proper Constitution for the Empire State, and that they can succeed only with the aid of women. Attorney General Carmody has rendered an opinion that the Convention will itself be the sole judge of the qualifications of its members, and if women should be elected as delegates it is unimportant that they would be unseated. It would be hard to find a district in this State in which the voters could be convinced that the feminine mind is better fitted than the masculine to the building of constitutions, so that it will require some conspiring of party leaders and some wire-pulling in order that women be elected, but we think the end might justify the means. While we should like to see our own district represented as strongly as possible, we hope that the experiment will be tried elsewhere. The most competent suffragist in the State ought to be elected, so that the people can learn by experience, while reading the reports of the proceedings, just how valuable female assistance is in this kind of work. Then we will all know just how to vote on the suffrage section of the Constitution when it is submitted.

HER LETTER.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

Awhile ago a big metropolitan newspaper published a letter written by a woman in St. Petersburg, Russia. She had sent it in the hope that it might perchance catch the eye of her son, who had been a student in the St. Petersburg University and had disappeared, with no trace to indicate whither or for how long.

The letter pathetically indicated a fear that he might be dead and prayed for some news that her dread might be allayed. It was no hint at all that she knew the why for his going, except that in the closing words she gave her "mother's word" that she would not attempt to force his free decision in anything, and that he might ask for whatever he liked, sure all the while that he had "one true friend, your mother."

It is quite impossible to read between the lines and guess at all accurately whether the son had been accustomed to ask overmuch or whether the mother had been too zealous in impressing herself and her opinions upon a young man soon to be ready to step into real life and to think and act for himself.

The most that appears to a certainty is that it is an unmindful son and a son with no great promise of manhood ahead, who wilfully slips away into the untried world without an apparent care or a thought of the mother left behind, whose love is mighty, whatever her weakness may be.

But as one reads her desperate willingness to yield when the time has come that she does not know whether he is living or dead, or perishing called overseas, and time the thought comes once again that many of the heartaches of the world would be lost on the way, many others greatly lessened if all of us would consistently try to think out our problems to a finish.

And that mother, waiting for news that may flash any minute or that may be delayed forever and forever—has she handled her problem the wrong way?

For there are sons and there are daughters who easily rebel when the guiding-hand is pretty firm, so firm, perhaps, that there is little room for free decisions of their own. They may be right in their rebellion or they may be wrong, but there surely are times when it is well even for parents to meet their children half way, when it comes to questions where yielding is possible. And the times come rather often to parents and to us all when prudence ought to bid us move with greatest care. For it is one thing to be firm and unyielding in a matter that seems very big and important and one-sided; but, alas! it is quite another when there is a fateful price to pay for carrying the point.

To insist that a son or a daughter or a husband or a wife or a somebody else follow a way that seems to one right is all very well up to a certain point; but when the mind of the son or the daughter, the husband, the wife, the somebody else, is turned in another direction, it is time to reckon upon results—will it pay to carry the struggle to a finish? In the case of that mother waiting in Russia, whatever the issue at stake, quite evidently it did not pay.

Is it a marriage of which a parent does not approve? Well, the objections may be very well founded, but after all, when the last wise caution has been uttered, the rest only leads to bitterness, to possible estrangement and perhaps silence forever. And does it pay? That is for the parent to say, but in the majority of cases, one observes that when an open break has been made, the yielding comes in the end, after a long period of bitterness that is never quite healed.

And is it the choice of a business, a profession, a calling in life, where notions and wills are a-clash? Many a father and many a mother have tried to force their own preferences upon sons, only to find at the last that the sons have slipped away, perhaps to join the army, perhaps to some other place of their choice, with never a word, never a hint of their going, and without a sign of regret.

Nobody wonders that parents object many times, and that husbands and wives and the rest of folk find sound enough reasons for taking an earnest stand—but when the last count is made it is often found that the continued objections have not paid.

For it is pathetic, if not worse, at the last to be found ready to yield everything if only there is a chance to begin all over again. For that chance many times is missing.

STONE CRUSHER OUTPUT.

Even Better Work Than Shown in The Freeman's Figures.

Editor Freeman:

In your issue of June 24 appeared an item in connection with "work done by the street force," which stated that "one day recently 85 tons of stone was crushed, which sets a record for crushing stone at the city plant." The above statement is a slight error of figures, as on that day 114 tons of stone was crushed, as can be seen from the fact that 82 cart loads of stone were hauled to crusher and crushed. Each cart load averaged over 2,800 pounds. The crushing plant averages 100 tons of stone crushed daily.

HURLEY.

Hurley, June 27.—Two of the young ladies of the village are to be reckoned among the "sweet girl graduates" of the season. Miss Ethel Elmendorf, has just finished the course of study at New Paltz Normal School with distinction and returned home on Thursday after the graduation festivities of the week. Miss Ellen Smith finishes the course of study at Ulster Academy and is enjoying the festivities accompanying the graduation exercises of the class.

Ray Elmendorf and Alexander Gibson with two friends went by automobile to New Paltz on Wednesday where they attended the graduation exercises as guests of Miss Ethel Elmendorf.

A number of the village folks attended the auction at Cantines Bridge on Wednesday. There was quite a fair attendance enjoying the occasion.

George P. Dumond has gone to Walton to attend the gathering of the Dumond clan at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Van Sickle have returned from a short visit to Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The well at Dr. Loughran's bungalow, "The Knoll" is now 157 feet deep; as there is a fine flow of water no further attempt will be made to go deeper.

Another automobile has come to the village. Grant Smith is enjoying the pleasures of motoring in a Studebaker car.

Everybody is congratulating A. G. DeWitt upon the arrival of his granddaughter, who has just arrived in Brooklyn. It is hoped she will come to Hurley during the summer.

Double Header on Sunday.

There will be a double header on McVey's field on Sunday afternoon when two fast games of baseball will be played. The first game will be called at one o'clock when the Barmann A. C. and the Local baseball team will clash. At 3:30 the Red Monograms will clash with the Manhattan Red Sox of New York city. The latter team is considered one of the fastest amateur teams playing in this section of the state. The Monograms have won thirteen straight games and except to annex another scalp on Sunday.

GEORGE KELDER BADLY INJURED

The many friends of George Kelder, formerly of this city, now of the firm of Hicks & Kelder, taxicab service of Schenectady, will regret to learn that Mr. Kelder recently met with a serious and all but fatal accident. Mr. Kelder was driving one of the firm's finest cars, a Cadillac, with three passengers, when the car collided with a D. F. H. train on the Albany road. The passengers escaped with bad bruises, while Mr. Kelder was less fortunate, breaking his leg. Fortunately the passengers jumped, for the car was practically a total wreck. Those who saw the accident said that the train neither blew a whistle nor rang a bell though the crossing is a bad one, the tracks being hidden by trees, etc. After the accident, however, the train stopped and took the passengers and Mr. Kelder to Schenectady.

THE JOINERS.

Kingston Lodge, No. 10, F. and A. M., will celebrate St. John's Day by attending the evening service of the First Reformed Church in a body. Rondout Lodge, No. 543, and many out of town Masonic friends have been invited and will be present. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. P. C. Penny of Schenectady, who is well known by the Masons of the city. Dr. Penny is the chaplain of St. George's Lodge of Schenectady, and as will be remembered, made the formal presentation speech of the Traveling Bible, which was brought by St. George's Lodge to this order last November. The main body of the church will be reserved for the Masonic orders and the Clinton Chapter, O. E. S., and the rest of the church for others who wish to attend. The organist of the church, W. W. Fredenburgh, has arranged a special musical program for this occasion.

PRESIDENT SETS ASIDE TUESDAY AS DAY TO MEET CLUBWOMEN.

(Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley.)

Washington, June 27.—Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, will be one of the three women who will be received by President Wilson at 9:15 o'clock, June 30, when he receives a deputation of clubwomen. The executive was waited upon by Mrs. William Kent, Mrs. Gilson Gardner and Mrs. Wiley. He said he would be glad to receive the women, and much to the pleasure of the delegation, fixed no time limited for the interview. The mass meeting at the public library, at which time short speeches will be made, will be held at 1 o'clock. From there the women will march directly to the president's office. It is said that the deputation will be the largest that ever visited the capital.

BRIDGE ROAD WINS CROSSING CASES

Judge Chester Decides That it May Proceed With its Bridge at Litts's Crossing and That its Foreman is Not in Contempt.

Judge Chester has handed down decisions in two cases brought by the New Paltz, Highland & Poughkeepsie Traction Company against the Central New England Railroad Company and the O'Brien Construction Company, which arose out of the differences between the trolley company and the steam railroad company over the construction of a new concrete bridge at Litts's Crossing in the town of Lloyd, work on which has been hindered through the efforts of the trolley company.

The trolley company tried to obstruct the Central New England's proposed work at Litts's Crossing before the public service commission, second district, but the commission approved the Central New England's plans with certain modifications. Proceedings for an injunction were then begun before Judge Hasbrouck, and when he decided against the trolley company, application was made for re-argument on the ground that the trolley company had not produced before him all the evidence in its possession.

Proceedings also were begun before Judge Chester, and by agreement all the proceedings were transferred to him, and the injunction suit was tried before Judge Chester soon afterwards, when he held the trial term of the supreme court in this city.

The facts involving the injunction are clearly set forth in Judge Chester's opinion.

When the trolley company found that the injunction had been modified so as to permit the work to proceed, it took an appeal to the appellate division, and secured a temporary injunction restraining the Central New England and the OBrien Company from continuing work pending the determination of that appeal, and notified its superintendent to notify the foreman of the construction gang employed by the Central New England and the OBrien Company to quit work. The trolley company's superintendent served a notice on the foreman, but the foreman came from Missouri and declined to quit merely on notice from the superintendent of the company that was fighting his employers. As soon as notice of the injunction was served on the Central New England attorneys, they telephoned to the Litts's Crossing foreman to quit, and he did.

For failure of the foreman to quit when notified by the trolley company's superintendent, the trolley company moved to punish the Central New England for contempt for failure to obey the injunction.

Judge Chester Dismisses Injunction.

Judge Chester dismisses the injunction suit and sets forth fully his reasons for doing so in an opinion, which is as follows:

The action is one in which the plaintiff seeks an injunction against the defendants to restrain them from constructing an under-crossing of its tracks. The plaintiff insists that it owns its right of way in fee and that the defendants cannot prosecute their contemplated operations by excavating under a bridge upon which the plaintiff operates its cars without first taking the property claimed by the plaintiff under the exercise of the power of eminent domain and making compensation therefor.

The place in question is known as "Litts's Crossing" in the town of Lloyd and the plaintiff claims a fee in a ten foot strip on the southerly side of the highway upon which strip it operates its road. The strip is entirely within the bounds of the public highway. It is not defined by metes and bounds. Under this strip the cut or excavation is proposed to be made.

On the trial a mass of documentary evidence in relation to the title of the parties and the character of it at the place in question was received.

The plaintiff's immediate title to the strip of land in question is a deed from Emanuel Metzger, referee in an action to foreclose a trust mortgage thereon dated July 23d, 1903. In that deed the strip is described as follows:

"A strip of land at least ten feet wide, running the entire distance of the lands and premises of the said party of the first part, and known as the New Paltz Turnpike, beginning at Poughkeepsie ferry at Highland, N. Y., at the most easterly line thereof to the Wallkill river at New Paltz, N. Y., the most westerly line of the same, for the purpose of building and maintaining thereon, and for that purpose only, an electric railway, and being the same premises conveyed to the New Paltz & Poughkeepsie Traction Company by John W. Searing, referee, by deed dated January —, 1900, and subject to the same conditions and restrictions contained therein to which reference is hereby made."

Without reciting them in detail it may be said that the deed from Searing, referee, and the other deeds in the chain of title show that the conditions and restrictions referred to clearly render the plaintiff's title subject to the usual rights of the public in and to the highway within which the ten foot strip is located.

A careful examination of the plaintiff's title appearing from the deeds in evidence leads me to the conclusion that it does not own any title in fee to the strip and that the most it can claim is an easement or right of way ten feet wide wholly within and at one side of the public highway for the sole purpose of building, maintaining and operating a trolley line thereon. Even this right is contested by the defendants which claim that the plaintiff is in unlawful occupation of this portion of the highway. It is not necessary on this trial to determine this question. It is enough to say that the plaintiff is and has been for many years occupying the ten foot strip in the highway with its road.

The defendant, the O'Brien Construction Company, is the contractor employed to do the proposed work for the defendant railway company. The work which they are proposing to do is in connection with and necessarily incidental to the elimination of two grade crossings nearby, the re-arrangement of the present crossing of the tracks of the parties, in order to permit under the railroad law, the construction of a "new railroad" under the existing highway at the point in question. It is proposed to do it under plans approved by the public service commission, second district, in a proceeding where the county superintendent of highways and town authorities of the town of Lloyd were represented. Under these plans it is proposed to shift the plaintiff's single track to a new bridge about twenty or twenty-five feet distant from the present highway and to move the highway at the point in question a like distance, and upon such changed highway and new bridge to permit the plaintiff to enjoy all the advantages in the highway which it now has. In other words, whatever easement or rights the plaintiff now has to operate its road on the ten feet strip in the highway, will be shifted for the public benefit to a slightly changed highway at the point in question and in such a way that its rights will not be affected in any way. Even the expense of doing the work of building the bridge, and re-constructing the highway, and the plaintiff's tracks thereon, is all placed, under the order of the public service commission, upon the defendant railway company. Under the railroad law, the expense of maintaing this bridge and its abutments, will fall upon the railway company. Whatever rights the plaintiff has in the highway are in my opinion subordinate and subject to the public and when the public convenience can be promoted without any impairment of plaintiff's rights as appears to be the case here, the extraordinary remedy of injunction should not be permitted to stand in the way.

It appears that the defendant railway company by virtue of two deeds, one from Litts and one from Terwilliger, owns the fee in the southerly half of the highway at the place in question subject to the public use, which is an additional reason why an injunction would be improper.

I think, therefore, that no proper case is made for an injunction and that the complaint should be dismissed with costs.

On the motion to punish for contempt, Judge Chester holds that no intent to violate the injunction and no contempt of the order granting it has been shown, and he denies that motion with $10 costs.

His opinion on the contempt motion is as follows:

After the plaintiff had secured a continuance of a temporary injunction against the defendants pending an appeal by the plaintiff to the appellate division from an order denying a motion to continue the injunction to prevent certain work by defendants at Litts Crossing in the town of Lloyd, the plaintiff's counsel telephoned its superintendent that an injunction had been issued and to notify defendants' workmen to stop work at the crossing. The superintendent served a written notice upon the foreman in charge of the work the next morning that he must stop work "under an injunction given us this 28th day of April, 1913, by the appellate division." No copy of the order containing the injunction was served and the notice inaccurately described it. Work was continued during that day not withstanding the injunction. As soon as the notice of the injunction came to the defendants' counsel, later in the day, they immediately telephoned the superintendent in charge of the work that the injunction was in force and to stop work a once, and from that moment that information was received, no further work was done.

There has been no intent therefore shown on the part of the defendants to violate the injunction and no contempt of the order granting it shown.

The motion is denied with $10 costs.

Balopticon Lecture on Guatemala.

Because of the near completion of the Panama canal, the Mexican complications and the rapid development of business interests in those quarters, our interest as Americans is at present largely centered in the regions known as tropical and Central America. Here we are finding a new Old World filled with all that is curious and wonderful, beautiful and interesting. The pastor of the Rondout Presbyterian Church will give a Balopticon lecture on Guatemala on Sunday evening. Seventy beautifully colored views will picture the Indian in his native costume, wonderful views of mountains and volcanos, cactus fences in full bloom, stately cathedrals, the Temple of Minerva, the Greek goddess being here adopted as patron saint of education, the street scenes, the home life of the people and their religious life and opportunities. Miss Les Kamp will sing the solo evening and morning by Spiker.

Just because another young man stepped on his feet while dancing the tango at a dance the other night there was a brief but lively scrap on lower Hasbrouck avenue on Thursday afternoon when the young man whose feet were stepped on at the dance met the man who did the stepping and uppercutted him one on the jaw. The man who was hit, whenever he had to leave his place of business next day carried a huge pair of shears and friends are wondering what will happen when the two men meet again.

Graduation Time

Graduation is an event worthy of some token of remembrance. Whether it is the grinning youngster passing from the primary to the grammar grades or the more serious-minded college senior, graduation means achievement and work well done. No time is more appropriate for a gift nor could one be surrounded by happier associations.

Our work is well done, too. Long ago we graduated and took our place as jewelers to meet your every want. At this season our stock is particularly rich in the things that are most suitable for commencement gifts. Rings, la vallieres, pendants and chains for the girls; fobs, scarf pins and watches for the boys. The present need not be nor should it be an expensive one, but you should insist upon the finest quality, and that is what we can offer you.

For failure of the foreman to quit when notified by the trolley company's superintendent, the trolley company moved to punish the Central New England for contempt for failure to obey the injunction.

For commercial candor and unconscious telling of the truth it is hard to beat some of the circulars received from various European resorts. Often they are translated literally from the foreign languages into English, and the results are a delight. One of these advertisements of a Hungarian summer resort tells us that it charges "Moderate prices, except during the height of the season!"

Graduation Time

Graduation is an event worthy of some token of remembrance. Whether it is the grinning youngster passing from the primary to the grammar grades or the more serious-minded college senior, graduation means achievement and work well done. No time is more appropriate for a gift nor could one be surrounded by happier associations.

Our work is well done, too. Long ago we graduated and took our place as jewelers to meet your every want. At this season our stock is particularly rich in the things that are most suitable for commencement gifts. Rings, la vallieres, pendants and chains for the girls; fobs, scarf pins and watches for the boys. The present need not be nor should it be an expensive one, but you should insist upon the finest quality, and that is what we can offer you.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF U. A.

The thirty-second annual commencement of Ulster Academy was held on Friday evening in the Orpheum theater on Broadway when a class of thirty-three received their diplomas. The theater began to fill at an early hour and before the exercises started there was a large and enthusiastic audience present. The graduating class this year was remarkable for the fact that there were nearly as many boys as there were girls in it, there being fourteen boys and nineten girls. Usually the girls far outnumber the boys.

The stage was handsomely decorated with the national colors and the footlights were banked with flowers and presented a pretty picture as the class marched in and were seated. The essays and orations were all of a high order and the speakers deserve great credit for the ability with which they handled their topics. The judges for the prize speaking, the Rev. F. B. Seeley and Judge Stephan, at the close of the program awarded the first prize for boys, a five dollar gold piece given by Fred J. Walter, to LaFayette Moore, and the second prize a two volume set of Don Quixote given by William C. De Witt to Carroll Simpkins. The first prize for girls a five dollar gold piece given by Edward Coykendall, was awarded to Miss Margaret McNelis, and the second prize a three volume set of Shakespeare given by William C. De Witt was awarded to Miss Florence Lapine.

After the invocation by the Rev. C. C. Marshall of Trinity M. E. Church the first speaker of the evening was William G. Gardner and as he arose to speak it was easily seen that he was the youngest member of the class for he was the only boy who had not donned, as yet, his first pair of long trousers. Despite his youthful appearance, Mr. Gardner delivered one of the best orations of the evening taking as his topic "Choosing an Occupation." Mr. Gardner said that the question of what a boy of girl intends to take up as his of her lifework is the most important question they have to solve. No one should take up a profession or trade unless they took an interest in it. He called attention to Colonel Gorgas and his wonderful work along sanitary lines in the canal zone as an example of a man interested in his work. In what occupation will one be able to serve the world to the best of his ability. He asked and answered it by saying that if a person has mechanical ability he should not hesitate to become a machinist because he would have grimy hands. It is better to be a first rate lawyer than a second rate doctor. In closing he said that the happy men was the one who has found his work.

Miss Helen Vosburgh then gave a very pleasing essay "A Guest of the Senses." She pictured a hut standing alone out in the forest and a glance through the window disclosed an old man who appeared to be gazing into the deep vistas of the past. As he sits there a change comes over his face and he attempts to sing but no sound falls from his lips. Suddenly there is a knock and he goes to the door and finds no one there, but instead of returning to his seat by the chimney corner he gazes out of the open door and the realization comes to him that something has surely happened throughout the world and he leaves the hut and starts to walk through the forest. The farther he walks the lighter his steps becomes, his back is not so bent, his eyes grow brighter and a new hope seems to fill them. Walking on he soon comes to a smooth steep hillside which is broad and flat at the top and a strong desire comes upon him to climb the hill and gain its summitt. As he reaches the top a wonderful picture meets his eyes. Peeping out of the fresh green grass at his feet are the timid faces of hundreds of violets and May flowers. In fact everything of nature's kind is bursting into wondrous beauty and life. Spring has come again and his whole soul is turned to music and words of love and praise of nature comes to him. How like we are to this acquaintance. During the long months of winter we think very little of the wonders of nature and when spring comes creeping in upon the earth we go on with our thoughts fixed upon our duties and never looking for the first blade of grass or the first bursting bud until like the four walls of the old man's house our cares have hemmed us in.

Carroll Simpson was the next speaker and he gave a fine and carefully prepared oration entitled "Liberty Interpreted from History." He asked what was the true meaning of that word liberty. Does liberty constitute a freedom to do what one likes at all times or does it mean freedom to direct one's own affairs until that point is reached where the rights of others are interfered with, and no further? Liberty, he said, had been striven for at all times in the history of the world. During the early days of our country England made a great mistake in trying to suppress this spirit in America. In the Civil War we have another example of a fight for liberty. The south saw nothing wrong with slavery and war resulted. In view of the early examples history seems to prove that true liberty consists not in the right to do what one likes at all times but in doing what one should do to respect the rights of his fellow countrymen. Not until every individual begins to think not of what he would like to do but of what he ought to do shall we enjoy liberty in the true sense of the word.

After a selection by Muller's orchestra Miss Pauline Castor delivered a very interesting essay "An Allegory—The Cycle of the Seasons." Miss Castor had a very beautiful imagination and pictured in glowing words the four seasons of the year the spring maid, the summer queen, the autumn prince and old King Winter.

Miss Florence Lapine, who was the next speaker, also had a fine essay, "Counterfeiters of Nature" and in well chosen words she told of the artist of the brush, the artist of music, and the artist of the pen as the great counterfeiters of nature. Her essay was delivered in well rounded tones and her enunciation was perfect.

After another selection by the orchestra, Frank Finley delivered a fine oration, "A New Eden." Mr. Finley's delivery was clear and distinct and every word could be distinctly heard. In fact his delivery was the best of the evening and he would undoubtedly have been awarded a prize but for the fact that during the course of his oration he had to be prompted several times. He told how forty-seven years ago the people of the United States were amazed at the expense of $7,200,000 which was expended for the purchase of a strip of territory then thought to be a barren waste, but which has since proved to be one of the richest sections of the world. When Secretary Seward completed the terms by which Alaska was transferred from Russia to this country, every one was amazed and for years Alaska was known as "Seward's folly." But Alaska, the name chosen by Seward himself, has proven to be a vast and rich territory. The speaker compared the size of Alaska as being one-fifth as large as the United States. He told of its wonderful river systems, of its mountains and plains and he compared its climate with that of other countries.

LaFayette Moore was the next speaker and his oration "In Defense of Armament" was the best delivered on the program. He said that many times we have heard quoted that old saying set forth by the father of our country "To be prepared for war is the most effective means of promoting peace." Since Washington made this statement not only our nation but almost every nation has had instances in its history to prove its truth. The speaker said that he did not want to appear as an advocate of war. War is deplorable, bringing as it does untold pain and suffering, but there is something far worse than war, an ignoble peace. War is, on the part of either side, the effort to right a wrong An ignoble peace often brought about by arbitration is a sort of mutual agreement between nations involved and the devil to let wrong go unrestrained. He said that orderly liberty, which is both the foundation and capstone of our civilization can be gained and kept only by men who are willing to fight for an ideal. A nation should have physical as well as moral courage, the capacity to do and dare and die at need. In tracing the history of our country he told how the names of the preservers of our country, Washington and Lincoln, will be forever honored. We are proud that our country leads in universal peace and we are also proud to know that the United States never hesitates to give the blood of her sons in the cause of liberty. Then let us make her able to command. When all nations mutually agree to disarm it is the solemn duty of the United States to keep up her own armament not only for the sake of her own peace but of universal peace as well.

The last speaker of the evening was Miss Margaret McNelis, who delivered a finely wrought out essay, "No North, No South." She said that there is no story in history that has as mysterious a facination as the recital of the rights and wrongs of the reverses and triumphs of the people who have brought the southern states of America to their present position of influence and power. It ought never to be necessary to advance an apology for the recounting of that story and the telling of it today has a peculiar appropriateness. Several weeks ago in the great city south of us millions halted to honor the hero dead of Vera Cruz. The country was reminded that although young among the nations of the earth it has the traditions of the matchless valor of American hearts and the undying glory of American arms of which the southern people furnish most illustrous example. She said we should naturally turn to the south and take to heart the spirit of those who fought the losing battle in the dark days of the rebellion and through sheer devotion maintained their part in the conflict even after their hope of victory had vanished. She then in vivid words pictures told of the south in the days of the reconstruction period following the Civil War. Today there is no north, no south, no east, no west, but one united country, and the true American everywhere is he who is ready to act and for his action ready to answer to himself, to his fellowmen, to the nation and to its God.

Principal Bridgman, in a few brief words, then turned the class over to William C. DeWitt, president of the board of education, who presented the class with their diplomas.

Superintendent M. J. Michael then awarded the prizes for the special honors as follows:

Highest honor, Miss Kathryn Bestle.

The Augustus W. Brodhead American History prize was awarded to Miss Lorena Walton. Miss Walton and Miss Helen A. Connelly secured equal honors in history.

General scholarship prize for the year was awarded to Miss Helen A. Connelly.

The Lindley M. Edwards mathematics prizes were awarded as follows: First prize to William Gardner; girls' second prize, Miss Kathryn Bestle; boys' second prize, Elmer H. Johnston.

The A. Wesley Thompson English prize was awarded to Miss Kathryn Bestle.

The Harriet C. Parker essay prize, two volumes of Lorna Doone, was awarded to Miss Mamye I. Gumaer.

The roster of the class has been printed in The Freeman.

The exercises were brought to a close with the benediction by the Rev. John J. Hickey, of St. Mary's Church.

Blessings of Hope.

Hope resists despair, it attacks its foe again and again. Without our asking we, who despaired one moment, are strangely hopeful the next moment. The quick shifts of the contest go on within us, and we seem to be but spectators. Hope prevails, thank kind heaven, most of the time. Perfect despair is rare, indeed.

Profits Better Than Ever

A large safety razor concern which has been advertising in the newspapers finds that the first quarter of 1914 shows larger sales and better profits than ever.

Considering the fact that this period was not one of booming business the showing is the more remarkable.

Long experience has taught the owners of this razor that they can get better results at less cost in the newspaper than through any other medium.

Dealers are always glad to push these articles because the advertising in the papers creates a definite demand.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF U. A.

The thirty-second annual commencement of Ulster Academy was held on Friday evening in the Orpheum theater on Broadway when a class of thirty-three received their diplomas. The theater began to fill at an early hour and before the exercises started there was a large and enthusiastic audience present. The graduating class this year was remarkable for the fact that there were nearly as many boys as there were girls in it, there being fourteen boys and nineteen girls. Usually the girls far outnumber the boys.

The stage was handsomely decorated with the national colors and the footlights were banked with flowers and presented a pretty picture as the class marched in and were seated. The essays and orations were all of a high order and the speakers deserve great credit for the ability with which they handled their topics. The judges for the prize speaking, the Rev. F. B. Seeley and Judge Stephan, at the close of the program awarded the first prize for boys, a five dollar gold piece given by Fred J. Walter, to LaFayette Moore, and the second prize a two volume set of Don Quixote given by William C. De Witt to Carroll Simpkins. The first prize for girls a five dollar gold piece given by Edward Coykendall, was awarded to Miss Margaret McNelis, and the second prize a three volume set of Shakespeare given by William C. De Witt was awarded to Miss Florence Lapine.

After the invocation by the Rev. C. C. Marshall of Trinity M. E. Church the first speaker of the evening was William G. Gardner and as he arose to speak it was easily seen that he was the youngest member of the class for he was the only boy who had not donned, as yet, his first pair of long trousers. Despite his youthful appearance, Mr. Gardner delivered one of the best orations of the evening taking as his topic "Choosing an Occupation." Mr. Gardner said that the question of what a boy of girl intends to take up as his of her lifework is the most important question they have to solve. No one should take up a profession or trade unless they took an interest in it. He called attention to Colonel Gorgas and his wonderful work along sanitary lines in the canal zone as an example of a man interested in his work. In what occupation will one be able to serve the world to the best of his ability. He asked and answered it by saying that if a person has mechanical ability he should not hesitate to become a machinist because he would have grimy hands. It is better to be a first rate lawyer than a second rate doctor. In closing he said that the happy man was the one who has found his work.

Miss Helen Yosburgh then gave a very pleasing essay "A Ghost of the Senses." She pictured a hut standing alone out in the forest and a glance through the window disclosed an old man who appeared to be gazing into the deep vistas of the past. As he sits there a change comes over his face and he attempts to sing but no sound falls from his lips. Suddenly there is a knock and he goes to the door and finds no one there, but instead of returning to his seat by the chimney corner he gazes out of the open door and the realization comes to him that something has surely happened throughout the world and he leaves the hut and starts to walk through the forest. The farther he walks the lighter his steps becomes, his back is not so bent, his eyes grow brighter and a new hope seems to fill them. Walking on he soon comes to a smooth steep hillside which is broad and flat at the top and a strong desire comes upon him to climb the hill and gain its summitt. As he reaches the top a wonderful picture meets his eyes. Peeping out of the fresh green grass at his feet are the timid faces of hundreds of violets and May flowers. In fact everything of nature's kind is bursting into wondrous beauty and life. Spring has come again and his whole soul is turned to music and words of love and praise of nature comes to him. How like we are to this acquaintance. During the long months of winter we think very little of the wonders of nature and when spring comes creeping in upon the earth we go on with our thoughts fixed upon our duties and never looking for the first blade of grass or the first bursting bud until like the four walls of the old man's house our cares have hemmed us in.

Carroll Simpson was the next speaker and he gave a fine and carefully prepared oration entitled "Liberty Interpreted from History." He asked what was the true meaning of that word liberty. Does liberty constitute a freedom to do what one likes at all times or does it mean freedom to direct one's own affairs until that point is reached where the rights of others are interfered with, and no further? Liberty, he said, had been striven for at all times in the history of the world. During the early days of our country England made a great mistake in trying to suppress this spirit in America. In the Civil War we have another example of a fight for liberty. The south saw nothing wrong with slavery and war resulted. In view of the early examples history seems to prove that true liberty consists not in the right to do what one likes at all times but in doing what one should do to respect the rights of his fellow countrymen. Not until every individual begins to think not of what he would like to do but of what he ought to do shall we enjoy liberty in the true sense of the word.

After a selection by Muller's orchestra Miss Pauline Castor delivered a very interesting essay "An Allegory—The Cycle of the Seasons." Miss Castor had a very beautiful imagination and pictured in glowing words the four seasons of the year the spring maid, the summer queen, the autumn prince and old King Winter.

Miss Florence Lapine, who was the next speaker, also had a fine essay, "Counterfeiters of Nature" and in well chosen words she told of the artist of the brush, the artist of music, and the artist of the pen as the great counterfeiters of nature. Her essay was delivered in well rounded tones and her enunciation was perfect.

After another selection by the orchestra, Frank Finley delivered a fine oration, "A New Eden." Mr. Finley's delivery was clear and distinct and every word could be distinctly heard. In fact his delivery was the best of the evening and he would undoubtedly have been awarded a prize but for the fact that during the course of his oration he had to be prompted several times. He told how forty-seven years ago the people of the United States were amazed at the expense of $7,200,000 which was expended for the purchase of a strip of territory then thought to be a barren waste, but which has since proved to be one of the richest sections of the world. When Secretary Seward completed the terms by which Alaska was transferred from Russia to this country, every one was amazed and for years Alaska was known as "Seward's folly." But Alaska, the name chosen by Seward himself, has proven to be a vast and rich territory. The speaker compared the size of Alaska as being one-fifth as large as the United States. He told of its wonderful river systems ,of its mountains and plains and he compared its climate with that of other countries.

LaFayette Moore was the next speaker and his oration "In Defense of Armament" was the best delivered on the program. He said that many times we have heard quoted that old saying set forth by the father of our country "To be prepared for war is the most effective means of promoting peace." Since Washington made this statement not only our nation but almost every nation has had instances in its history to prove its truth. The speaker said that he did not want to appear as an advocate of war. War is deplorable, bringing as it does untold pain and suffering, but there is something far worse than war, an ignoble peace. War is, on the part of either side, the effort to right a wrong An ignoble peace often brought about by arbitration is a sort of mutual agreement between nations involved and the devil to let wrong go unrestrained. He said that orderly liberty, which is both the foundation and capstone of our civilization can be gained and kept only by men who are willing to fight for an ideal. A nation should have physical as well as moral courage, the capacity to do and dare and die at need. In tracing the history of our country he told how the names of the preservers of our country, Washington and Lincoln, will be forever honored. We are proud that our country leads in universal peace and we are also proud to know that the United States never hesitates to give the blood of her sons in the cause of liberty. Then let us make her able to command. When all nations mutually agree to disarm it is the solemn duty of the United States to keep up her own armament not only for the sake of her own peace but of universal peace as well.

The last speaker of the evening was Miss Margaret McNelis, who delivered a finely wrought out essay, "No North, No South." She said that there is no story in history that has as mysterious a facination as the recital of the rights and wrongs of the reverses and triumphs of the people who have brought the southern states of America to their present position of influence and power. It ought never to be necessary to advance an apology for the recounting of that story and the telling of it today has a peculiar appropriateness. Several weeks ago in the great city south of us millions halted to honor the hero dead of Vera Cruz. The country was reminded that although young among the nations of the earth it has the traditions of the matchless valor of American hearts and the undying glory of American arms of which the southern people furnish most illustrous example. She said we should naturally turn to the south and take to heart the spirit of those who fought the losing battle in the dark days of the rebellion and through sheer devotion maintained their part in the conflict even after their hope of victory had vanished. She then in vivid words pictures told of the south in the days of the reconstruction period following the Civil War. Today there is no north, no south, no east, no west, but one united country, and the true American everywhere is he who is ready to act and for his action ready to answer to himself, to his fellowmen, to the nation and to its God.

Principal Bridgman, in a few brief words, then turned the class over to William C. DeWitt, president of the board of education, who presented the class with their diplomas.

Superintendent M. J. Michael then awarded the prizes for the special honors as follows:

Highest honor, Miss Kathryn Bestle.

The Augustus W. Brodhead American History prize was awarded to Miss Lorena Walton. Miss Walton and Miss Helen A. Connelly secured equal honors in history.

General scholarship prize for the year was awarded to Miss Helen A. Connelly.

The Lindley M. Edwards mathematics prizes were awarded as follows: First prize to William Gardner; girls' second prize, Miss Kathryn Bestle; boys' second prize, Elmer H. Johnston.

The A. Wesley Thompson English prize was awarded to Miss Kathryn Bestle.

The Harriet C. Parker essay prize, two volumes of Lorna Doone, was awarded to Miss Mamye I. Gumner.

The roster of the class has been printed in The Freeman.

The exercises were brought to a close with the benediction by the Rev. John J. Hickey, of St. Mary's Church.

Blessings of Hope.

Hope resists despair, it attacks its foe again and again. Without our asking we, who despaired one moment, are strangely hopeful the next moment. The quick shifts of the contest go on within us, and we seem to be but spectators. Hope prevails, thank kind heaven, most of the time. Perfect despair is rare, indeed.

Profits Better Than Ever

A large safety razor concern which has been advertising in the newspapers finds that the first quarter of 1914 shows larger sales and better profits than ever.

Considering the fact that this period was not one of booming business the showing is the more remarkable.

Long experience has taught the owners of this razor that they can get better results at less cost in the newspaper than through any other medium.

Dealers are always glad to push these articles because the advertising in the papers creates a definite demand.

SHOCKING THE SALAMBOS

Deed of Vengeance and Its Happy Sequel

By ROBERT J. PEARSALL

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Andrew Hemphill glanced at the gaudy prints outside of the Gaiety theater, started to pass on, hesitated, saw the sign "five cents" above the ticket window, turned in, paid his nickel and entered the folding doors.

Then he leaned back in his seat and stared at the white curtain on which moving pictures would presently be thrown, and in a few moments saw shaping there a little private moving picture of his own, so distasteful that he fought against the illusion for a time and then resigned himself to it, as he had many times before, and let memory run riot.

His father was the village merchant. He had been offered the choice between a clerkship in the store and a position as teller and all round man in the village bank. In an evil hour he had chosen the latter.

All, for two years everything had gone well. He had followed the leisurely routine of his work contentedly and might still be following it, if—

At the thought a snarl disfigured his face. If it had not been for John Barton! For years he had been saying that.

Every misfortune of his life he laid to this one case. When he found himself penniless and hungry, he muttered the words.

When he lay on freezing nights shelterless, for lack of money to hire himself a bed, he blamed it on John Barton.

It was a simple story. John Barton was the cashier. They two were the only employees of the bank, the only ones, save the president, who had access to the funds. There had been a robbery. Andrew had been arrested.

Part of the money was found in his room.

He found it impossible to account for his actions on the night of the robbery. He had been lured away by a faked message.

It was clearly a frameup against him, and by whom but John Barton? But he could not prove it.

Arrested and imprisoned, he lost his nerve. The jail was old and rickety, and one night he pried the bars away with a leg of the iron bathtub. He escaped, but only into a larger prison.

For to him, nameless, friendless, penniless, with a price on his head, offered by the Bankers' association, of which he shuddered to think, the freedom which he gained proved less desirable than the confinement from which he had fled.

Always, by misfortune, haunted always by dread of recognition and ar-

...d while Andrew strove against the leash of his will, longing to spring upon the stage and throttle the man who had so wronged him, but holding himself nevertheless in his seat, the Salambos retired, the lights were dimmed and the act began.

Through a hazy mist of blood Andrew saw the rest of the performance.

He saw the great Salambos, enveloped in a mystic halo of yellow light, move stiffly upon the stage.

He heard the hated voice chanting monotonously the explanation of his feats.

"I am the human salamander," he said, "the man who is impervious to fire, heat and electricity. Now I grasp those glowing balls, white heated by 5,000 volts from your own city power house, five times the amount required to electrocute the ordinary man.

"To touch me now would mean instant death. Now I blow flames from my mouth to prove that my body is like a raging furnace. Now I ignite this cloth from my finger tip, this cigar, this candle. Now"—

It was really a mystifying performance, but Andrew at first paid little attention to it.

He only knew that his enemy was before him, unsuspecting, and in his power.

But toward the last of the act an idea began to form, an idea so devilish that at first he recoiled from it, but so satisfying to his almost insane craving for revenge that he could not rid himself of it.

It was a continuous vaudeville show, and he sat through two performances.

When he finally left the idea had shaped itself. But as yet his unaccustomed mind only dallied with it.

The knowledge that he could do the thing was a pleasing tidbit to his imagination. Its actual performance was impossible as yet.

It is an old, old story. Night after night he came to the Gaiety, sat unheeding through the first few acts, sat with strained attention through the performance of the Salambos, nursing his hatred, gloating over his enemy, accustoming his mind to the at first impossible deed.

He could not sleep; he could not eat; he could think of nothing but his revenge.

One of Andrew's many occupations had been that of a telephone linesman, so he went about his task that night in a workmanlike manner that excited no curiosity in the minds of those that happened to notice him.

He had timed the performance accurately.

He seated himself astride the crosspiece bearing the heavy cables, insulated, but alive with deadly energy.

From one of these cables a small wire branched off into the Gaiety, supplying that building with light and also, as Andrew had learned, with the electricity used by the Salambos in his act.

Andrew, equipped with insulated pliers and heavy rubber gloves, removed the insulation from the small wire and from another cable with practiced hands.

Then he attached another short wire he had brought with him to the exposed stretch of cable.

He waited a moment. There was a burst of applause from within the theater.

He knew what that marked, the first exhibition of immunity on the part of the Salambos, the seizing of the electrically heated balls.

Instantly he dropped the wire from his pliers upon the exposed surface of the wire that led into the Gaiety, knowing that it would send 10,000 additional volts of electricity crashing through the body of his enemy.

There was a crackling sound like a thousand firecrackers.

A sudden white light flared through the screened windows of the theater.

The applause died out to a sickening silence, and Andrew heard the sound of a heavy fall.

Then came sudden screams and hoarse shouts and a sharp slam that Andrew knew for the hasty dropping of an asbestos curtain.

From out the exits of the theater poured a panic stricken mob, and Andrew dropped unobserved into its midst. And, as he listened to the excited exclamations that came to him from every side, his madness dropped from him, and he saw himself for what he was—a murderer!

"It's what comes of playing with death!" said one man.

"It must have killed him instantly," said another. "Why, when he dropped there seemed nothing left of him. His clothes went that quick, like a flash. Lord, I can see it now."

"Here come the firemen. Make way, make way there."

Andrew slunk away up a side street. Of a sudden he was very sick.

He leaned weakly against the side of a building, and men passing thought him drunk.

Why had he done it? Why, why? Revenge? Revenge on whom? For what? He could not remember.

He had killed the Salambos, they said. Who was the Salambos? What matter? He had killed him. He was a murderer. He had killed, killed—

After awhile he recovered to a certain extent and staggered away.

His memory came back, too, and he knew whom he had killed, and why, but it brought only fresh torture.

John Barton—why, he had played with John Barton as a boy! And he had killed him. No, no, impossible!

But, yes, he had killed the Salambos, and the Salambos was John Barton, and John Barton was the Salambos, and—

He found himself repeating this rigmarole aloud and checked himself in terror.

He saw people whom he met looking at him curiously, and tried to get a grip on himself.

But he kept on walking. He wanted to go back to his room, but he was afraid. Somebody or something might meet him there.

He wanted to go into a saloon and get a drink. It might steady him, but again he was afraid.

He walked, walked, walked. Sometimes he broke into a shambling run. He left the downtown district far behind.

His path now led between long rows of darkened houses, filled with sleeping people. Sleeping! He would never be able to sleep again.

Hours passed. Beneath a flickering street light he looked at his watch. It was 4 o'clock. Soon it would be daylight.

At the thought a mighty terror seized him and shook him from head to foot. Light!

How could he face the light? Stripped of its mantle of darkness, would

But when the first sickly light of morning stole over the city he stopped and gasped and reeled back against a telephone pole.

For the instinct of the criminal had asserted itself, his unguided steps had shaped themselves to a circle, and he was standing in front of the Gaiety theater.

For fully five minutes he stood with eyes staring and mouth agape.

Then something snapped in his brain like a cord, and the strain relaxed. He would hide his guilt no longer. With lagging but determined steps he started away, headed straight for the police station.

But his body, weak from its all night vigil, seemed about to fail him.

At the first street corner he stopped and, leaning against a building, waited for a car.

A taxicab whirled down the street. Andrew saw it without realization, and when it stopped in front of him and the occupant sprang out he still paid no attention.

It was only when he heard his own name called loudly that he roused himself with a start of terrified amazement.

For the voice was John Barton's voice, and the figure approaching him with outstretched hand was John Barton's figure.

But John Barton was dead!

His hand, however, was warm, and his voice was anything but the voice of a corpse.

"Andrew! As I live, Andrew Hemphill! You know me, don't you, Andy? Come, brace up! Hey, you," to the chauffeur, "give me a hand here. The man's fainted!"

When Andrew recovered consciousness he was in the Harbor Emergency hospital, and his hand was enveloped in the hand of the man whom he had thought he had murdered.

"Are you really alive?" he half whispered.

"Me? It's you that's the dead one, from appearances. What on earth was the matter?"

"I thought"—

"You don't mean to say that you thought you were still wanted back home? Lord! You've been cleared long ago.

"The president of the bank died and left a confession that he was the guilty one, that he had been short in his accounts and faked the robbery to cover the shortage and tried to cover his own steps by throwing the blame on you.

"Of course there's a technical charge of jail breaking against you, but that won't amount to a hang. And your old father's crazy to find you. We'll go back together. I've got to go back east and have another dummy made anyway, and so"—

"Another dummy!"

"Yes. Don't you know that you're talking to the great Salambos?" Andrew shuddered. "Well, you are, and some crazy fool switched on about 20,000 volts of electricity last night and burned the dummy that the audience thought was myself into a crisp.

"The papers are full of it this morning. It's spoiled my graft here on the coast anyway until they forget about it, and so"—

But Andrew had fainted again.

NEW YORK WOMAN DIFFERS OVER ASQUITH'S ATTITUDE.
(Miss Martha Klatchken.)

New York, June 27.—Miss Martha Klatchken, suffragist and secretary of field work in New York, said: "I think that Asquith is cornered. He doesn't know which way to turn or what to say. He knows that his only safety lies in extension of time. He has know all along that the day would come when he would be forced to see a deputation of the militants. He knew it three months ago. Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

THESE are economic hints which every housekeeper should become familiar with, for whether she does all of her own work or has an assistant the efficient housewife should realize that system and management are the two watchwords which bring her greatest rewards.

One systematic housewife has a kitchen calendar which she makes herself each year early in December and which she claims is invaluable. She prepares 365 sheets of fairly heavy paper, so that it does not tear easily. One-half inch from the top of the paper on each side a hole is punched; through this a cord is run so that the pages turn easily. Each page is dated. Immediately under the date every Monday has "washing" written, Tuesday "ironing," Wednesday "silver and brasses cleaned," Thursday "cleaning bedrooms and bathrooms," Friday "cleaning living rooms and dining room" and Saturday "cleaning kitchen, pantries, icebox, etc."

This plainly indicates the main outline of the week's work. The rest of the page is blank, so that a good big space is left for incidental happenings.

If there is to be a dinner Wednesday, for instance, it is put down, with the number of guests invited. Then the menu is planned and written in, and sufficient space is left at the bottom for memoranda of purchases that are needful. This particular housewife asserts that her homemade kitchen calendar suits her better than any she can buy because it is absolutely individual. Often good recipes are jotted down, and at the end of the year, when it is time to hang up the new calendar, these are copied off and put in the recipe division of the card catalogue box.

One of the cardinal principles of the efficient housewife is to concentrate her thought on the work of the hour and not waste mental energy on the innumerable tasks which the day holds for her.

There is the story of the woman who lamented: "Here's Monday and all the washing's got to be done! Tuesday, the ironing! Wednesday, the baking! Goodness, half the week's gone and not a thing done yet!"

One truly efficient little woman was asked how she could give so many delightful little entertainments, and do it apparently, with no trouble and such manifest enjoyment on her own part.

She smiled wisely and said, "I always plan ahead, but I never worry ahead." If she is to give a dinner Thursday, for instance, the menu is prepared and the main ordering done Tuesday. She is fortunate in having a butcher she can trust, so that her meats are ordered then for delivery Thursday. Wednesday she prepares the soup stock. Then she looks over her linen, dishes and silver and has everything in readiness to set the table the next afternoon. Early Thursday morning she is out, completing her ordering, and by noon everything is ready for the actual cooking. Directly after luncheon the table is arranged and then she rests for an hour or two. She has even been known to go to a club meeting or a bridge party, much to the amazement of friends who know her plans for the evening.

Her dinners are always successful, for the guests are sure to find an enthusiastic welcome, which makes them feel that they are really wanted, and that there has been no trouble or fuss in preparing for them.

A NURSERY NECESSITY.

How to Make a Useful Gift For the Baby.

It's rather a proposition to know just what to get for the new babies of our numerous friends. Usually the mites are deluged with gold pins enough to keep their clothes hanging together for years, even should all the stitches drop out, and the rattles and the powder puffs and the duplicates upon duplicates of many things would keep an orphanage going for some time.

But, strange to say, few people think of sending those brand new babies nice little slips for their small pillows. Occasionally an utterly impossible slip, beribboned and befrilled out of recognition, and certainly out of any comfort for the downy head, makes its appearance on the scene, propelled there by an enthusiastic spinster who never put a baby to sleep in her life. But the slips that are both pretty and serviceable and restful aren't thought of.

Do not have the material too thin for these slips, or they will not stand the frequent washing required for all of baby's linen. Batiste is too thin, and muslin is too coarse. A fine quality of linen, medium weight, is best. Hemstitch the hem and embroider on the end of the upper side of the case (not the center where the baby's head is to lie) a pretty conventional wreath that will encircle the tiny monogram of the baby, or at least the initial of its last name. Really beautiful hand embroidered slips can be obtained at the stores at very moderate prices, and one can very easily place upon them the monogram, for which a space is usually left.

Deed of Vengeance and Its Happy Sequel

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Andrew Hemphill glanced at the gaudy prints outside of the Gaiety theater, started to pass on, hesitated, saw the sign "five cents" above the ticket window, turned in, paid his nickel and entered the folding doors.

Then he leaned back in his seat and stared at the white curtain on which moving pictures would presently be thrown, and in a few moments saw something there a little private moving picture of his own, so distasteful that he fought against the illusion for a moment and then resigned himself to it, as he had many times before, and let memory run riot.

His father was the village merchant. Andrew had been offered the choice between a clerkship in the store and a position as teller and all round man in the village bank. In an evil hour he had chosen the latter.

Still, for two years everything had gone well. He had followed the leisurely routine of his work contentedly and might still be following it, if—

At the thought a snarl disfigured his face. If it had not been for John Barton! For years he had been saying that.

Every misfortune of his life he laid to this one case. When he found himself penniless and hungry, he uttered the words.

When he lay on freezing nights shelterless, for lack of money to hire himself a bed, he blamed it on John Barton.

It was a simple story. John Barton was the cashier. They two were the only employees of the bank, the only ones, save the president, who had access to the funds. There had been a robbery. Andrew had been arrested.

Part of the money was found in his room.

He found it impossible to account for his actions on the night of the robbery. He had been lured away by a faked message.

It was clearly a frameup against him, and by whom but John Barton? But he could not prove it.

Arrested and imprisoned, he lost his nerve. The jail was old and rickety, and one night he pried the bars away with a leg of the iron bathtub. He escaped, but only into a larger prison.

For to him, nameless, friendless, penniless, with a price on his head, offered by the Bankers' association, of which he shuddered to think, the freedom which he gained proved less desirable than the confinement from which he had fled.

Haunted by misfortune, haunted always by dread of recognition and arrest, he drifted from place to place, a picturesque wanderer, sometimes a worker, sometimes a tramp.

His life was ruined, and he knew it. And for its ruin he hated himself, and hated doubly, with a hatred that grew through years of brooding grown to a monomania, its first cause, John Barton.

The curtain ran up, and the show began. A short skirted singer and a pale faced comedian appeared. Andrew stirred restlessly and wished himself again in the streets.

There followed a mediocre juggler and a man who went through the unvarying process of being tied and untied in various ways and then releasing himself. And then the feature number of the evening was announced: "The great Salambos."

Andrew straightened himself with a sudden start that caused his neighbor on either side to look at him apprehensively, for in the suave personage coming from the side of the stage stiffly introducing his own act he recognized John Barton!

It was impossible, but it was true. The same face, the same figure, the same voice, the same—Andrew strained his eyes—the same scar above the right eyebrow.

And while Andrew strove against the leash of his will, longing to spring upon the stage and throttle the man who had so wronged him, but holding himself nevertheless in his seat, the Salambos retired, the lights were dimmed and the act began.

Through a hazy mist of blood Andrew saw the rest of the performance.

He saw the great Salambos, enveloped in a mystic halo of yellow light, move stiffly upon the stage.

He heard the hated voice chanting monotonously the explanation of his feats.

"I am the human salamander," he said, "the man who is impervious to fire, heat and electricity. Now I grasp those glowing balls, white heated by 5,000 volts from your own city power house, five times the amount required to electrocute the ordinary man.

"To touch me now would mean instant death. Now I blow flames from my mouth to prove that my body is like a raging furnace. Now I ignite this cloth from my finger tip, this cigar, this candle. Now"—

It was really a mystifying performance, but Andrew at first paid little attention to it.

He only knew that his enemy was before him, unsuspecting, and in his power.

But toward the last of the act an idea began to form, an idea so devilish that at first he recoiled from it, but so satisfying to his almost insane craving for revenge that he could not rid himself of it.

It was a continuous vaudeville show, and he sat through two performances.

When he finally left the idea had shaped itself. But as yet his unaccustomed mind only dallied with it.

The knowledge that he could do the thing was a pleasing tidbit to his imagination. Its actual performance was impossible as yet.

It is an old, old story. Night after night he came to the Gaiety, sat unheeding through the first few acts, sat with strained attention through the performance of the Salambos, nursing his hatred, gloating over his enemy, accustoming his mind to the at first impossible deed.

He could not sleep; he could not eat; he could think of nothing but his revenge.

One of Andrew's many occupations had been that of a telephone linesman, so he went about his task that night in a workmanlike manner that excited no curiosity in the minds of those that happened to notice him.

He had timed the performance accurately.

He seated himself astride the crosspiece bearing the heavy cables, insulated, but alive with deadly energy.

From one of these cables a small wire branched off into the Gaiety, supplying that building with light and also, as Andrew had learned, with the electricity used by the Salambos in his act.

Andrew, equipped with insulated pliers and heavy rubber gloves, removed the insulation from the small wire and from another cable with practiced hands.

Then he attached another short wire he had brought with him to the exposed stretch of cable.

He waited a moment. There was a burst of applause from within the theater.

He knew what that marked, the first exhibition of immunity on the part of the Salambos, the seizing of the electrically heated balls.

Instantly he dropped the wire from his pliers upon the exposed surface of the wire that led into the Gaiety, knowing that it would send 10,000 additional volts of electricity crashing through the body of his enemy.

There was a crackling sound like a thousand firecrackers.

A sudden white light flared through the screened windows of the theater.

Then came sudden screams and hoarse shouts and a sharp slam that Andrew knew for the hasty dropping of an asbestos curtain.

From out the exits of the theater poured a panic stricken mob, and Andrew dropped unobserved into its midst. And, as he listened to the excited exclamations that came to him from every side, his madness dropped from him, and he saw himself for what he was—a murderer!

"It's what comes of playing with death!" said one man.

"It must have killed him instantly," said another. "Why, when he dropped there seemed nothing left of him. His clothes went that quick, like a flash. Lord, I can see it now."

"Here come the firemen. Make way, make way there."

Andrew slunk away up a side street. Of a sudden he was very sick.

He leaned weakly against the side of a building, and men passing thought him drunk.

Why had he done it? Why, why? Revenge? Revenge on whom? For what? He could not remember.

He had killed the Salambos, they said. Who was the Salambos? What matter? He had killed him. He was a murderer. He had killed, killed—

After awhile he recovered to a certain extent and staggered away.

His memory came back, too, and he knew whom he had killed, and why, but it brought only fresh torture.

John Barton—why, he had played with John Barton as a boy! And he had killed him. No, no, impossible!

But, yes, he had killed the Salambos, and the Salambos was John Barton, and John Barton was the Salambos, and—

He found himself repeating this rigmarole aloud and checked himself in terror.

He saw people whom he met looking at him curiously, and tried to get a grip on himself.

But he kept on walking. He wanted to go back to his room, but he was afraid. Somebody or something might meet him there.

He wanted to go into a saloon and get a drink. It might steady him, but again he was afraid.

He walked, walked, walked. Sometimes he broke into a shambling run. He left the downtown district far behind.

His path now led between long rows of darkened houses, filled with sleeping people. Sleeping! He would never be able to sleep again.

Hours passed. Beneath a flickering street light he looked at his watch. It was 4 o'clock. Soon it would be daylight.

At the thought a mighty terror seized him and shook him from head to foot. Light!

How could he face the light? Stripped of its mantle of darkness, would

But when the first sickly light of morning stole over the city he stopped and gasped and reeled back against a telephone pole.

For the instinct of the criminal had asserted itself, his unguided steps had shaped themselves to a circle, and he was standing in front of the Gaiety theater.

For fully five minutes he stood with eyes staring and mouth agape.

Then something snapped in his brain like a cord, and the strain relaxed. He would hide his guilt no longer. With lagging but determined steps he started away, headed straight for the police station.

"Another dummy!"

"Yes. Don't you know that you're talking to the great Salambos?" Andrew shuddered. "Well, you are, and some crazy fool switched on about 20,000 volts of electricity last night and burned the dummy that the audience thought was myself into a crisp.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTS REVIEW

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, June 27.—The old Cub machine, once the mightiest in baseball, has been broken, never again to be mended. Of the grand old gang that thrilled thousands with their wonderful team work in the old days, while working under the Cub standard only one still wears the Cub uniform, and he—Frank Schulte—is slipping fast, and seems due to be shunted off to the scrap heap ere the year is out.

Chance, Tinker and Evers, that wonderful double play combination, is scattered in three different leagues, Chance managing the New York Yankees and Tinker is holding a like job for the Chicago Feds, while Evers is cavorting around the keystone sack for the Boston Nationals.

Miner Brown is scouting for the Feds, Jack Pfeister is somewhere in the low class minors, Overall is on the coast in semi-retirement, and Johnny Kling has quit the game for all time. Jimmy Scheckard is in the American Association. Artie Hofman is with the Feds and Jimmy Slagle and Steinfeldt have passed out of the game forever.

Nothing can save the Feds, in the opinion of organized baseball. Ban Johnson says they will be in the scrap heap before August 1. For your information it may be remarked that Ban was the very same person who said the Feds were a joke, that they wouldn't open the season, that they would blow up by June 1, and then by July 1.

And now comes Chris Mathewson of the Giants, John McGraw, who bosses that outfit, both arrive with remarks that the Feds are ready to turn up their toes. John says, in one of his signed articles that "I would be sorry to see Eddie Collins and some of the other stars jump to the Feds, for several reasons, but most of all because they will hurt themselves and cannot save the Feds."

Now you see how it is, don't you? Even if Eddie Collins, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Honus Wagner, Clyde Milan, Walter Johnson and 75 other stars of the American and National Leagues jump to the Feds the Feds will fail. Why? Well, because Ban Johnson, Garry Herrmann, Chris Mathewson, John McGraw and other other organized fellows say so. That's why.

Charlie Herzog of the Reds, denies that he ever said that "there are at least four teams in the American League that can beat the Giants any day in the week." Too bad, Charlie, too bad. Quite a lot of people agreed with those sentiments, and were ready to slip you a medal for having spoken something that had weight to it. Now you don't get the medal.

Those Federal League promoters ought to be in jail on the charge of theft, according to the views of organized baseball. They've stolen the sentiment from baseball.

Most of the fight clubs in and around this section are closed for the rest of the summer, which means that all the punching persons who didn't lay aside a portion of their winter winnings will have to go to work digging ditches to keep themselves in food and tobacco until harvest time comes again.

Honus Wagner, now over 40 years of age, is batting at a higher clip than when he was twenty. Which leads to the question, How much will he be batting at 60?

Crescents vs. Red Seals.

The Crescents will line up against the fast Red Seals Sunday at the Bush lot. Each team has won a game. The first game the Crescents lost by a score of 5 to 4. The second game they won by a score of 12 to 9. The rubber will be played Sunday and a $5 bill will be handed to the team that wins. Next Saturday, July 4, the Crescents will travel to Rosendale and play a double header, one in the morning and one in the afternoon.

HUGE TRAFFIC AT THE W. S. CROSSING

Police Report Covering Two Days and Not Including Trolley Car Traffic Shows Need For Abolition of Grade Crossing—Automobiles More Numerous Than Wagons.

The report of the policemen stationed by Mayor Canfield at the West Shore crossing Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, to count the number of persons and vehicles using that crossing has been given to the mayor and is about ready to be submitted to the public service commission.

The two days that the count was taken were rather cloudy and by no means the busy days for travel, but in spite of this, the report shows the great necessity of requiring the railroad company to place its tracks under ground.

The question of eliminating the grade crossing at Broadway has been agitated for years. Petitions of all kinds have been sent to the public service commission and yet the public is still required to quietly wait for long freights to pass before their business can be attended to.

It is hoped that this report, when submitted to the commission will not die, but will be carried on and the crossing done away with. The report, as submitted by the police department is as follows:

The records were taken on June 23, and 24, June 23 being cloudy and rainy and June 24 being clear.

Pupils' Violin Recital.

Next Tuesday evening, June 30, the violin pupils of Ford Hummel will give a pupils' recital in the First Presbyterian Church, corner of Elmendorf street and Tremper avenue, at 8 o'clock. No tickets are required for this concert as the public is cordially invited to attend the same without further investigation. Katharine Pehlemann will play Dvorak's "Humoreske;" Marion Kingman will play Haydn's "Menuette in F;" Miss Winifred Wardel will give as her solo, the De Beriot Concerto No. 9, Allegro Maestoso; and Miss Hazel Tuttle's selection will be Massenet's "Thais." The young men who will play are Barentsen Bishop, who will give a "Danse Rustic" by Borowski; John Wilson's number will be "Kuiawiak" (Polish dance) by Wienawski; Harry Demgen will play "Obertass" by the same composer; Tredwell Wilson will give Kreisler's "Schon Rosmarin;" Earle Hummel will play the Handel Sonata in A Major; Gustave Cook's solo will be De Beriot's "Air Varie No. 6;" John Waelde will render the Mendelssohn Concerto in E Minor, Andante and Allegro Molto Vivace; and Fred Goodwin will close the program with Saraste's "Spanish Dance." Such a program should bring out an audience that will fill the First Presbyterian Church.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTS REVIEW

New York, June 27.—The old Cub machine, once the mightiest in baseball, has been broken, never again to be mended. Of the grand old gang that thrilled thousands with their wonderful team work in the old days, while working under the Cub standard only one still wears the Cub uniform, and he—Frank Schulte—is slipping fast, and seems due to be shunted off to the scrap heap ere the year is out.

Chance, Tinker and Evers, that wonderful double play combination, is scattered in three different leagues, Chance managing the New York Yankees and Tinker is holding a like job for the Chicago Feds, while Evers is cavorting around the keystone sack for the Boston Nationals.

Miner Brown is scouting for the Feds, Jack Pfeister is somewhere in the low class minors, Overall is on the coast in semi-retirement, and Johnny Kling has quit the game for all time. Jimmy Scheckard is in the American Association. Artie Hofman is with the Feds and Jimmy Slagle and Steinfeldt have passed out of the game forever.

Nothing can save the Feds, in the opinion of organized baseball. Ban Johnson says they will be in the scrap heap before August 1. For your information it may be remarked that Ban was the very same person who said the Feds were a joke, that they wouldn't open the season, that they would blow up by June 1, and then by July 1.

And now comes Chris Mathewson of the Giants, John McGraw, who bosses that outfit, both arrive with remarks that the Feds are ready to turn up their toes. John says, in one of his signed articles that "I would be sorry to see Eddie Collins and some of the other stars jump to the Feds, for several reasons, but most of all because they will hurt themselves and cannot save the Feds."

Now you see how it is, don't you? Even if Eddie Collins, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Honus Wagner, Clyde Milan, Walter Johnson and 75 other stars of the American and National Leagues jump to the Feds the Feds will fail. Why? Well, because Ban Johnson, Garry Herrmann, Chris Mathewson, John McGraw and other other organized fellows say so. That's why.

Pupils' Violin Recital.

Next Tuesday evening, June 30, the violin pupils of Ford Hummel will give a pupils' recital in the First Presbyterian Church, corner of Elmendorf street and Tremper avenue, at 8 o'clock. No tickets are required for this concert as the public is cordially invited to attend the same without further investigation. Katharine Pehlemann will play Dvorak's "Humoreske;" Marion Kingman will play Haydn's "Menuette in F;" Miss Winifred Wardel will give as her solo, the De Beriot Concerto No. 9, Allegro Maestoso; and Miss Hazel Tuttle's selection will be Massenet's "Thais." The young men who will play are Barentsen Bishop, who will give a "Danse Rustic" by Borowski; John Wilson's number will be "Kuiawiak" (Polish dance) by Wienawski; Harry Demgen will play "Obertass" by the same composer; Tredwell Wilson will give Kreisler's "Schon Rosmarin;" Earle Hummel will play the Handel Sonata in A Major; Gustave Cook's solo will be De Beriot's "Air Varie No. 6;" John Waelde will render the Mendelssohn Concerto in E Minor, Andante and Allegro Molto Vivace; and Fred Goodwin will close the program with Saraste's "Spanish Dance." Such a program should bring out an audience that will fill the First Presbyterian Church.

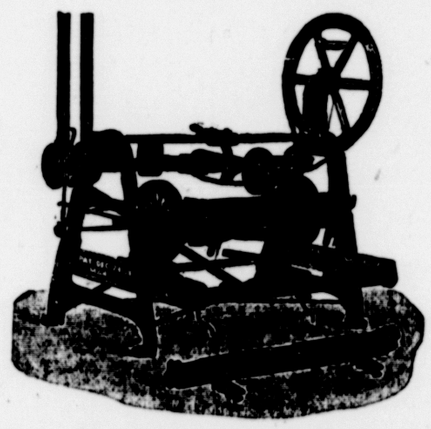
To Lovers of the Lawn Beautiful



I am glad to notify you that I have installed in my well equipped shop one of the famous ideal LAWN MOWER GRINDERS and am now able to do that class of work accurately and put your mower in as good cutting shape as the day it left the factory, giving the desired clearance behind the knives, thus reducing the friction, making mowing a pleasure instead of a drudge.
